$250 Million Canadian Aid Planned for Commonwealth

Advance Nod To Finlayson In Tory Vote

By PETE LOUDON, Times Political Reporter

VANCOUVER—According to most corridor oracles it will be Deane Finlayson who leads the Progressive Conservative Party when the shouting dies down at Vancouver Hotel tonight.

But the race, which was to be decided by balloting of 600 delegates between 2 and 3 p.m. today, was expected to end in a photo finish.

Last minute opinion polls gave a slight edge to the Finlayson campaign over that of Dr. Desmond F. Kidd. It is said committee workers for the present leader had marshalled 375 sure votes before balloting began.

Veteran political observers say this convention will stand out in history. Few can remember a leadership election that was so much in doubt to the final hour.

CAREFUL WATCH

Committee rooms of both candidates have been watched carefully. If there was a large crowd in Dr. Kidd's room, an hour later a crowd of similar size was packing the Finlayson quarters.

If one candidate received a standing ovation, his opponent got a welcome two minutes later of similar intensity.

If the corridors on the fourth floor were thick with Finlayson buttons, observers found Kidd ribbons draped all over delegates congregating on the fifth floor.

When Deane Finlayson gave a rousing speech, Dr. Kidd followed it with another address of equal merit. (But on the whole, speeches by both candidates have been described as lacking fire. On major issues, the two candidates were in agreement).

What gives the edge to Finlayson? Most feel it is the fact he is a young man who has already proven himself by sticking with the party during the tough years.

Dr. Kidd, while showing all the outward signs of a good leader, hasn't been around long. A party member for less than two years, he is still a newcomer to many of the delegates.

Although he has the avowed support of the young Conservatives, he was facing judgment by delegates who are mainly old-time party members.

CHAMPION AND CHALLENGER

An even, ding-dong battle was being waged in Vancouver today by Dr. Desmond F. Kidd, left, and Deane Finlayson for leadership of the B.C. Conservative Party. Just before balloting began this afternoon observers gave a slim edge to Finlayson who has held the post for seven years.

Arsenal Takes First Place In Football

See Scores, Page 29

LONDON (UPI) — Arsenal, once the glamour team of English soccer, took over first place in the league standings today by defeating neighboring Tottenham, 3-1.

The victory gave Arsenal a total of 10 points from seven games played. Tottenham's vulnerable defence now has yielded 18 goals in seven games, dropping the team among the tail-enders of the first division with only three points.

West Ham, which led the league going into day's games, suffered a 4-2 setback at the hands of Nottingham Forest and dropped back into a tie for second place with Luton and Bolton. Luton and Bolton played a scoreless tie.

Everton scored its first points of the season by upsetting Manchester City, 3-1, at Manchester, and the Wolverhampton Wanderers edged the Blackburn Rovers, 2-1.

Kamloops Man Wins $10,400 In Sweepstake

MONTREAL (CP)—Two persons in Quebec and a third at Kamloops, B.C., share in $51,900 jackpot in a sweepstakes based on today's St. Leger race at Doncaster, England.

Oswald St. Laurent of Montreal will collect $26,000 for holding a ticket on the winning horse, Alcide. Second-place ticket on None Nicer—worth $15,500—was held by Raymond Berube, Lac Bouchette, Que. The third-place ticket, worth $10,400, was held by Frank Yocovici of Kamloops, B.C.

The sweepstakes was run by the Quebec Army, Navy and Air Force Veterans in Canada.

Ex-'Freedom Fighter' Returned to Hungary

NEW WESTMINSTER (CP) — A Hungarian "freedom-fighter" branded a Communist organizer has been returned to Hungary by the Canadian Immigration Department.

Zigmond Pater, 27, described by officials as an "intense" man known to have been in contact with Communist party leaders in Vancouver, left with five others who had asked to go home on compassionate grounds.

Pater requested the government to pay his way to Hungary a month ago. "We were only too happy to assist him out of the country," said an official.

Pater told authorities he would "rather live under Communism and have a job than be unemployed in a democracy."

Stop China's War-Roar Ike Tells Khrushchev

NEWPORT, R.I. (AP)—President Eisenhower today appealed to Russia to prevail on Communist China to renounce use of force in Formosa Strait area and turn to peaceful negotiations.

In a new message to Soviet Premier Khurshchev, Eisenhower criticized the Russian leader for what he called a "one-sided denunciation" of United States policy in the Far East.

At the same time, Eisenhower made it clear that the U.S. has no intention of pulling its forces out of the Far East as Khurshchev demanded early this week.

Referring to Khrushchev's 4,000-word letter to him, Eisenhower said:

NO EFFORT FOR PEACE

"I regret to say I do not see in your letter any effort to find that common language which could indeed facilitate the removal of the danger existing in the current situation in the Taiwan (Formosa) area.

"On the contrary, the description of this situation contained in your letter seems designed to serve the ambitions of international Communism rather than to present the facts. I also note that you have addressed no letter to the Chinese Communists leaders urging moderation upon them.

"If your letter to me is not merely a vehicle for onesided denunciation of United States action, but is indeed intended to reflect a desire to find a common language for peace, I suggest you urge these leaders to discontinue their military operations and to turn to a policy of peaceful settlement of the Taiwan dispute."

While Eisenhower was conciliatory in tone in that respect, he was firm in making it clear that the United States is ready to fight in the Far East if the Communists push too far.

That also was the central theme of Eisenhower's television-radio address Thursday night.

FORMOSA TALKS OPEN SOON

WASHINGTON (UPI)—the United States and Red China have agreed to begin peace talks on the Formosa crisis in the next few days, informed sources said today.

The djscussions will take place in Warsaw between U.S. Ambassador Jacob D. Beam and Red Chinese envoy Wang Ping-Nan.

Reds Again Repel Quemoy Supply Convoy

Four Nationalist Chinese supply ships were forced to withdraw after unloading only a small portion of their cargo.

Within one hour the Reds poured more than 7,000 high-explosive shells into Liaolo Beach where the vessels were trying to unload supplies for the besieged Nationalist outpost island.

This was the third unsuccessful attempt by the Nationalists to run the blockade with U.S. warships escorting them within three miles of Quemoy. It was the first attempt under cover of darkness.

The American spokesman said the ships remained at the beach for 23 minutes before the heavy fire forced them to withdraw

HONG KONG (Reuters) — Communist China today issued its fifth "serious warning" on the intrusion of United States warships into its territorial waters, the New China News Agency said.

Police Probe Jewel Theft

Oak Bay police today were conducting an investigation into three overnight burglaries in the municipality since Thursday, including theft of jewels with an estimated value of $1,500.

Police said the release of further details at this time would hamper the investigation.

Other departments in the Victoria area were co-operating with Oak Bay police on the case.

The jewel theft, from a private residence, as were the other burglaries, occurred Thursday night.

Both of the other entries took place Friday night and thefts included jewels, cash and other items, police said.

'INSOLENT' AFRICAN LIFE WORTH $140

PARY, South Africa (Reuters) — A 20-year-old white mother Friday was fined £50 ($140) for killing an African woman after the judge said he took into account that the servant had been "insolent."

Mrs. Marie de Wet was found guilty of shooting the 28-year-old African woman servant in the stomach and warned by the judge to be careful of firearms in the future.

A policeman testified that Mrs. de Wet told him the African woman had refused to do the washing or clean the house and had burned a petticoat belonging to her.

'THE CEMENT'

We've Got Sentimental Backbone

TORONTO (CP) — The immense power of emotional and sentimental ties are the backbone of the British Commonwealth, Viscount Hailsham of London said Friday night.

"The cement of the Commonwealth is not only, or even primarily, economic," the lord president of the Privy Council and chairman of Britain's Conservative party told the Canadian Bar Association at its annual dinner.

"I believe that we are too slow to recognize, perhaps in a sense too shy to assert, the immense power of emotional and sentimental ties.

"Though most of us would desire something more showy and perhaps more intellectually satisfying, we cannot but be grateful that we have an association as flexible, as sensitive, as useful and as effective as the British Commonwealth of Nations."

Police Believe Truck May Be Tip To Hit-Run Death

Latest lead in an unsolved hit-run July 5 which took the life of Harry V. Mills, 78, of 1403 Ryan, was a green pickup truck abandoned about two months in bush near Sidney.

RCMP were investigating the truck today in an effort to establish ownership and reason for the truck's abandonment.

City police have been searching since the death of Mr. Mills a few days after the hit-run at Cook and Hillside, for a green pickup truck, about 1950 model, seen leaving the accident.

MONTREAL (CP)—A huge Canadian aid program for needy Commonwealth countries, ranging perhaps to more than $250,000,000 over the next three years, likely will be disclosed before the two-week, 11-country Commonwealth trade and economic conference opening here Monday.

At the same time, it was learned Friday, Canada plans to launch a vigorous attack against Britain's long-maintained import restrictions on goods from Canada and the United States, charging they are unjustified and discriminatory.

Initial shadow-boxing, undertaken at a confidential meeting of Commonwealth advisers Friday, indicated Britain will put up a stiff defence of her curbs, informants said.

Her government advisers were reported to have argued that Britain's accumulation of large reserves of U.S. dollars and gold —now totalling more than $3,000,000,000—is no indication she is on the road to complete recovery. The economic road was still precarious and she had to be cautious.

AIMED AT ASIA

However, the Canadian government delegation likely will continue the attack and some reference to this may be contained in the initial statement of welcome to be read by Finance Minister Fleming at Monday's opening.

The aid program would be disclosed later in the week, perhaps by Prime Minister Diefenbaker when he addresses the delegates at a dinner Thursday. The Canadian hope is that the offer will encourage other Commonwealth countries to take similar steps, helping to overcome poverty in the Asian countries, Ghana and the former British colonies moving to full independence, such as the West Indies Federation and Nigeria.

GIFTS OF FOOD

Here's how the Canadian aid program likely will shape up:

1. A boost in the annual $35,000,000 Colombo Plan contribution to south and southeast Asia perhaps to $50,000,000 a year.

2. Annual gifts of food, mostly wheat, to Asian countries, valued at some $25,000,000. Coupled with this offer would be a Canadian pledge to "consult" other wheat-producing countries, such as Australia and the U.S., before the food gifts are made, to avoid charges that Canada might be upsetting normal commercial wheat markets.

3. Direct aid to the West Indies of between $10,000,000 and $20,000,000 a year for capital expansion of that Caribbean area.

aid program would be established on a basis of continuing for at least the next three years. At that time the situation might be reviewed and the program revised or extended, depending on economic developments in Canada and the receiving countries.

Vicious Crime Wave Hits Vancouver

VANCOUVER (CP) — Two men were robbed, a woman taxi-driver was assaulted and a man with a gun tried to break into a suburban apartment in a night of vicious crime on the lower mainland Friday night.

G. A. Barclay, 67, a Canadian Legion official, was beaten by two thugs and robbed of about $100 when he stepped from his car outside his Vancouver home.

An unidentified woman taxi-driver told police she was beaten, choked and criminally assaulted by a man who asked her into a house to help him subdue a "drunken brother." Police today were holding a 24-year-old laborer in connection with the assault.

Virginia Joins 'Rebellion' As Faubus Closes Schools

LITTLE ROCK, Ark. (AP)—The governors of Arkansas and Virginia have ordered some schools closed in their states in the wake of the U.S. Supreme Court decision that integration of Negro students must proceed immediately at Arkansas' Little Rock Central High School.

This action was taken only a few hours after the unanimous decision of the court in Washington Friday.

At Newport, R.I., President Eisenhower issued a statement saying that anarchy might result from defiance of the court's integration stand and urging the people to avoid it.

Governor Orval Faubus of Arkansas signed laws passed recently authorizing him to close four senior high schools—including Central and a Negro school—in Little Rock. The schools had been scheduled to open Monday.

Faubus said he issued the order to avoid "impending violence and disorder." He set Oct. 7 as the date for a special election on the question of integrating the schools.

In Virginia, Governor J. Lindsay Almond, Jr., announced the closing of Front Royal High School in Warren County, effective Monday. It will be the first school to shut down under the state's plan for resisting desegregation.

Wider Trade Seen at Meet But No 'Magic'

By VICTOR J. MACKIE, Times Ottawa Correspondent

MONTREAL—Delegates arriving here for the Commonwealth trade and economic conference anticipate some expansion of trade and measures for mobilizing more development resources may follow their talks, but they do not look for spectacular results.

The conference opens Monday in Montreal's newly built Queen Elizabeth Hotel, the most modern convention hotel in the world. More than 150 delegates will attend and they will have staffs that will double their number.

Canada's Progressive Conservatives have been urging the convening of such a conference for years. At times it appeared that the Tory call for such a Commonwealth meeting was based on a conviction that if only the members of the Commonwealth would hold such an economic conference all their economic troubles would disappear.

Now that the conference has actually come into being the Conservative government appears to be less certain that it will produce magical solutions to the many and varied economic and trade problems. Canadians and other delegates arrived at Montreal with a spirit of "cautious optimism" not too sure what could be accomplished, but hopeful that some good would come out of the two-week talks.

The British have stressed their desire to examine every possible means of extending Commonwealth trade. In the course of these discussions recent Canadian restrictions on certain British textiles and amendments to the Customs Act to tighten up its anti-dumping provisions will come under criticism.

Anxious Not to Antagonize U.S.

While seeking to expand trade within the Commonwealth there will be no suggestion of widening British preferential tariffs, it is understood.

The delegates will want to take no action that might antagonize the United States. While there will be strenuous efforts and exploratory talks aimed at increasing trade that increase will not be at the expense of the United States, Canadian government spokesmen have insisted.

Australia's minister of trade, Rt. Hon. John McEwen, one of the first to arrive in Montreal, made no secret of the fact his country is not happy with its export-import trade disparity.

He said the chief problem in Australian-Canadian trade is his country's shortage of dollars. He said he expected however, that the sterling areas would be strengthened during next week's talks.

Mr. McEwen said Australia regarded as serious the world fall in prices of primary commodities, particularly agricultural products. He said the possibility of devising some scheme of price stabilization will probably be discussed.

Britons Favor Business Missions

The British are coming to Canada convinced that Commonwealth trade can be given impetus through the exchange of missions of businessmen. This will be advocated rather than preferential tariffs.

A British plan for a Commonwealth bank may be dropped. There is a noticeable lack of enthusiasm in Canadian quarters. Canada appears convinced that it is unnecessary to have other agencies added to the World Bank and the International Monetary Fund.

New countries in the Commonwealth will be looking for sources of capital and other forms of aid.

the closing of any school that has admitted Negroes.

"NATIONAL TRAGEDY"

Georgia's Senator Richard B. Russell, one of the southern Democratic leaders, said "a great nationtl tragedy impends." He said the south's white citizens are law-abiding but they won't "surrender to the dictates of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People merely because that organization is able to use the present Supreme Court as its mouthpiece."

In Little Rock, Mrs. L. C. Bates, NAACP Arkansas director, was asked what she thought of the governor's action in ordering the schools closed.

"The Negro children will just have to wait like the rest of the children until the schools are opened," she said.

Faubus moved only hours after the Supreme Court said in effect that Central High, scene of racial riots and guarded by troops last year, must continue integration no matter how violent the opposition. The school board had sought a 2½-year delay in integration.

PRIVATE SCHOOLS

Faubus' apparent objective is to close the four Little Rock high schools — including all-Negro Horace Mann High—then open Central High and possibly others as private schools with the state paying tuition.

He appears to believe the state thus can avoid forced integration because the Supreme Court has not issued integration orders involving private schools.

The legislature two weeks ago gave him power to close schools faced with forcible racial mixing in classes. An 1875 law makes the use of public school facilities by private groups legal.

Minutes after he signed the school closing bill, Faubus accepted a summons in the state court suit filed by a woman who is a segregationist but does not want the schools closed.

The timing of the suit led to speculation that it involved more than met the eye but observers were unable to determine its exact meaning.

OTTAWA (CP)—L. Phillipe Picard, 59, Canada's ambassador to Argentina since late 1955, is leaving his post, it was disclosed here Friday. The decision of the former Liberal member of parliament was confirmed by Finance Minister Fleming, who said "politics have not entered into this decision."

DEBBIE REYNOLDS
. . . she seeks split

Divorce—and No Punches Pulled

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — The marriage of Debbie Reynolds and Eddie Fisher, once thought to be one of Hollywood's happiest couples, is on its way to the divorce courts.

Debbie Friday asked her lawyer to get her a divorce after Eddie blasted her hopes for a reconciliation.

"A breakup was inevitable," said Eddie. "The marriage would have come to an end even if I had never known Elizabeth Taylor. I alone accept full responsibility for its failure."

Debbie seemed surprised to learn that Fisher wasn't happy with her. She said:

"It seems unbelievable to say that you can live happily with a man and not know he doesn't love you. But that—as God is my witness—is the truth."

Lawyers will meet next week to discuss the divorce.

WON'T SPARE LIZ

Any attempt to relieve Miss Taylor from any responsibility falls on completely deaf ears," said Debbie's lawyer, Frank B. Belcher. "I'm not going to spare anyone if it is necessary to protect the rights of Debbie and her two fine children."

Miss Taylor's dates with Fisher in New York last week preceded a domestic argument between Eddie and Debbie on his return here. After the spat he moved out.

Before she slipped into seclusion, Miss Taylor told reporters that "I'm not taking anything away from Debbie—because she never had it."

But, said Debbie Friday, "I had truly believed that we had found our happiness. I know I had. I now realize when you are deeply in love—how blind one can be. Obviously I was."

LONDON, Ont. (CP(— Pal Salaman, 49-year-old Hungarian immigrant, Friday night was found guilty of murder and sentenced to hang Nov. 26. He was charged with murdering Mrs. Joyce Alexander in her apartment July 26.

Eddie Takes Liz Instead

MIAMI BEACH (UPI) — A life-size portrait of Debbie Reynolds—which the pert actress originally intended as a gift for hubby Eddie Fisher—rests on an artist's easel here with nobody to take it.

Artist Ralph Cowan told Miami newsmen that Miss Reynolds ordered the portrait made when she was here with her husband last spring. He said she planned to give it to him as a surprise at his birthday party in Hollywood Sept. 26.

But that was before their current separation.

"Now she's called with word that she doesn't want it," Cowan said.

To add to the confusion, Cowan said the painting was ordered after the young couple saw a similar life-size portrait Cowan did of Elizabeth Taylor.

The Taylor portrait has since been delivered to Fisher in Hollywood, the artist said.

"The man who ordered it painted never finished the payments," he explained. "Fisher bought it from me as a present for Liz, and it was delivered to him this week."

Cowan added:

"At the time they (Eddie and Debbie) both saw the picture in my studio, Debbie described Liz as 'the most beautiful woman I have ever seen' and said she was a 'wonderful person'."

Airman Found 2 Still Sought

EDMONTON (CP)—The air force has successfully completed one air search in the northwest and today will increase its efforts in another.

Found alive and well in northern British Columbia late Friday was Staff Sgt. K. E. Barber of the United States Air Force. His light plane crashed Monday after straying from his Alaska Highway route to his home base at Elmendorf, near Anchorage.

Still missing farther south, in northwestern Alberta, are forestry worker Richard Bolam, 29, of Edmonton and his passenger Don Roberts of Fort Vermilion, Alta. They, too, disappeared Monday on a short 40-mile flight to take provisions to firefighters in the region north of Grande Prairie.

Tories Whoop Up Storm In Leadership Battle

By PETE LOUDON
Times Political Reporter

VANCOUVER—With a rootin', tootin', whoopin' nomination night demonstration under its belt, the Progressive Conservative convention settled down today to the solemn business of choosing a leader.

To nobody's surprise, the choice will be between present leader Deane Finlayson and aspirant Dr. Desmond F. Kidd.

It was more like a U.S. political convention than the usually-sedate Canadian variety.

If the Tory delegates intended to prove there was life in the old party yet, they succeeded—at least on a decibel basis.

FIGHTING SPEECHES

As party veteran Hon. H. H. Stevens put it: "If it isn't the best convention since 1902, it's certainly the noisiest."

Amid all the noise, the two candidates joined in fighting speeches asking for party loyalty—but each made a fighting speech on his own behalf.

Mr. Finlayson, who called the convention last summer to obtain what he describes as a "clear mandate," told the delegates Friday night that "I wish to assure myself and the public that I command the loyal and unselfish support of the majority of our party membership."

In turn, Dr. Kidd said that finally and inevitably "the hour of decision is with you.

"The year of decision is with this party," he said. "Emphatically, vehemently, I say that we are once again a major political force.

"Our opportunity is great. But our responsibility is so much greater."

YEARS NOT LOST

A massive ovation greeted Finlayson when he rose to speak. He reviewed the years since he took over the leadership in 1952 and said: "However, these years have not been lost.

"Had we not done our duty this party would not today be considered as the alternative to the crowd in Victoria. We would not be here in this convention."

The party leader reviewed Progressive Conservative provincial policy and criticized the Social Credit administration for a lack of policy.

Mr. Finlayson said British Columbia has reached the "point of catastrophe in labor discord."

The time had come for "a new, streamlined labor code to replace the present acts, many of the conditions of which are in conflict with the other.

"I do not believe that this is the time to use a big stick on labor although I will confess that certainly there is provocation in some quarters.

"I believe that this is a time for sober thought but it is also a time for action. I have said that the various forces should be brought together immediately to clean their own houses. I have also said that the government should review its entire labor legislation."

Dr. Kidd, who also got a room-shaking welcome, said it was "Time the people of B.C. were given the type of government they want."

WASTEFUL IDEAS

"They have had enough of flights of fancy," he said. "Enough of ideas conceived in haste and executed in waste. Our taxes are the highest in Canada—our debt also the highest. As your leader I will fight to see the people of B.C. are given the real facts of our finances."

Dr. Kidd talked about the north, which as a practising geologist he knows intimately.

He said: "We live in an area of large undertakings. Big jobs require big organizations to carry them out. As a party, though, we have always stood for free and competitive enterprise. Let us never lose sight of the word 'competitive.' We want no great industrial octopus sprawling across the province of B.C."

Dr. Kidd said that as leader of the party he would defend the right of labor to strike, "but equally strongly I would insist that labor be made responsible in law for its actions.

"If labor wants the authority, labor must accept the responsibility."

WHAT'S YOUR OPINION?

By MICHAEL ROSE

Mrs. Brenda Dickinson, 3901 Hobbs.

"I think it is an excellent idea since we are always short of that sort of thing. We lack somewhere for the children to play safely in here in Cadboro Bay."

Dickinson Mackay

Mrs. Ruth Mackay, 2616 Sinclair.

"The park will be just fine for the children, and I think that the grownups will enjoy it too. The beach is one of the best I have ever seen and very safe for tiny children."

Mrs. Florence Ohrn, 2923 Qu'Appelle.

"In the summer time we girls like to take our lunches down there and just sit and relax for a while. It is so quiet and feels private just to be able to sit and watch the ships and fishing boats."

Ohrn Rourke

Barney Rourke, 1636 Warren Gardens.

"The potential beach and park here should be most certainly utilized to the full for all the children to come in this area. I think the Gyros have done great work and deserve the respect of the community."

U.S. Demands Russia Find Downed Airmen

Details Asked On Plane Crash In Armenia

The state department said in Washington the plane had been intercepted by Soviet fighters but did not charge that it was shot down.

The note demanded information on the whereabouts and condition of the 11 men, their earliest return if they are still alive and the return of the bodies of six other crew members killed in the crash Sept. 2.

SIX FOUND DEAD

The Soviet government reported discovery of the plane's wreckage and the bodies of six crew in a formal note delivered to Davis Friday, six days after the U.S. government had asked for information on the missing plane and 10 days after the plane disappeared on a flight in Turkey.

The state department note also asked the Soviet government to allow embassy officials and other experts to identify the bodies and wreckage at the scene of the crash.

It asked the Soviet government to press a search for the missing 11 if they have not been located so far.

The U.S. note expressed surprise—"in view of the involvement of Soviet aircraft"—that the Soviet government had originally denied any knowledge of the incident and that it delayed in replying to an American note of Sept. 6 requesting information.

Russia said the plane crashed about 34 miles northwest of Yerevan, capital of Soviet Armenia, 35 miles from the Turkish border. The note added that it was "a significant distance into the Soviet Union . . . evidence that the plane intentionally violated U.S.S.R. state borders."

Quiz Show Sponsorship Cancelled

NEW YORK (AP)—P. Lorillard Company announced Friday it has cancelled sponsorship of the television quiz show, The $64,000 Challenge. A former contestant said last week he was given answers in advance, a charge denied by program officials.

The show's producer said, "The cancellation does not concern any accusation made against the show."

It was the second quiz show to be cancelled recently. Dotto was dropped with a minimum of explanation by Colgate-Palmolive Company and by two networks carrying it, CBS and NBC. Later, disclosure of complaints to the Federal Communication Commission and to Manhattan district attorney's office that Dotto was rigged touched off an investigation of a number of programs.

The Union of South Africa had 37,460,000 sheep in 1956, an increase of 400,000 over the previous year.

BCE Bus Fares Hearing Stalled On Legal Points

Points of law raised by T. P. O'Grady, corporation counsel for Victoria, to the indefinite adjournment Friday of the public hearings into the B.C. Electric's bid for a bus fare increase.

Commission chairman Henry F. Angus announced the surprise adjournment because, he said, four points raised by cities fighting the proposed fare increases probably will have to be referred to the B.C. Court of Appeal for a ruling.

RULING NEEDED

"We feel we should get an authoritative ruling on these points of law which have been raised," Mr. Angus said. "We will consider it and advise all interested parties."

The points are:

1. Whether the utilities commission is justified in considering the B.C. Electric application in view of a July hearing for a boost in the company's electricity rates, when the company's financial position on electric, gas and transit operations was discussed.

2. Whether the commission should review the "fair rate of return" — amount allowed the company in earnings on its investment—on every increase application.

3. Whether the company should be allowed to ask for its increases in the form of an amendment to one section of the Public Utilities Act or should have to prove existing rates are unjust under a different section of the act.

4. Whether the commission can refuse to make public a company annual report submitted to the commission before the hearing.

A. Bruce Roberts, vice-president of B.C. Electric, opposed the adjournment because "there is no reason that this application should be held up awaiting a court decision."

He said the court ruling might "take up to a year because it's certain to be taken to the highest court in the land."

Four Years in Jail For Woman's Attacker

WHITEHORSE, Y.T. (CP)—A territorial court jury deliberated four hours Friday before convicting Brian Charles Dixon James, 24, of bodily harm with intent to endanger life. James, originally charged with attempting to murder Blanche Attley last May 9, was sentenced to four years in a British Columbia prison.

Forger Suspect Held As $7,500 Bail Set

Bail of $7,500 has been set for William Black, 32-year-old Vancouver man who will be tried at the fall assizes on a charge of forging an income tax refund cheque.

This figure was set by Mr. Justice J. G. Ruttan in Supreme Court Friday on application from Crown prosecutor Lloyd McKenzie.

Mr. McKenzie said a further 18 to 20 charges would probably be laid against Black at the Assize Court trial.

He said the evidence indicated the Crown will describe an alleged cheque forgery ring planned "on the half-million dollar scale."

Black is still in custody but it is expected the $7,500 bail will be provided shortly.

BRITONS SEND BOARDERS HOME

ABOARD THE FRIGATE EASTBOURNE, Off Iceland (Reuters) — Nine Icelanders who have been aboard the Eastbourne since the Royal Navy removed them from the British trawler Northern Foam Sept. 2 were put ashore secretly at Keflavik, Iceland, early today.

Commodore Barry Anderson said he made this decision because he felt the Icelanders should be allowed to return to their homes.

"They were only doing their duty in the first place," he said. The Icelanders have been on the Eastbourne since they boarded the Northern Foam inside Iceland's disputed 12-mile fishery limit.

Sidewalk Project At Half Estimate

Saanich has completed its 1958 sidewalk building program for half the estimated cost.

Reeve George Chatterton said today council allowed a budget of $18,000 for sidewalk construction near schools, but municipal engineer Neville Life completed the work for about $8,000.

The surplus funds, he said, would be used for additional sidewalk construction.

The reeve said this year's program called for filling 3,900 feet of sidewalks with gravel for concreting and paving in 1959.

"The surplus funds will now enable us to do more work on sidewalks," he said.

Price of Transit System Reduced

VANCOUVER (CP)—A lease instead of a purchase plan for some of British Columbia Electric's transit property has lowered the price on the transit system.

Timothy J. Manning, who has offered to buy the system, explained Friday that the new price is around $10,000,000. Previous guesses at the cost have ranged between $15,000,000 to $20,000,000.

Mr. Manning said the figure is now lower because some pieces of real estate used jointly by the power company and its bus line would not be purchased.

He said these facilities would be leased until the new company could build its own.

BINGO GUEST FROM 'ACROSS THE WATER'

Mystery guest at the 11th huge Kinsmen bingo game Monday at 8 p.m. in the Memorial Arena is a closely guarded secret, but it is known he or she will come from "across the water."

But how far or from which direction is anybody's guess.

"However, it will be an absolute thriller . . . very touching," bingo chairman Jack Phillion said today.

Close to 5,000 admission tickets have already been sold.

Tankers Collide In Gulf, 21 Missing

BAHREIN, Persian Gulf (AP) —Two oil tankers collided and caught fire at midnight off the coast of Muscat in the Gulf of Oman. Twenty-one seamen were missing.

In London, reports to the admiralty said 34 were rescued out of a crew of 40 on the Fernand Gilabert, a French tanker and 30 out of a crew of 45 on the Melika, a Liberian ship.

U.S. BUILDING SUPER-ROCKET

Space Man Planned?

WASHINGTON (AP) — An army plan for constructing a super-booster rocket engine is arousing speculation the defence department may be contemplating an attempt to put a manned satellite in orbit.

The speculation was sparked Friday with announcement of a $2,000,000 army contract award for a mammoth booster with an aim of "placing very large payloads into orbit."

The booster, the first stage of a multi-stage rocket, will have a thrust of 1,500,000 pounds—approximately eight times more powerful than any existing propulsion unit in the U.S. rocket arsenal.

In announcing the air force contract last July, the defence department said an engine of this size "could be used to put up a manned satellite weighing approximately 10,000 pounds or an interplanetary vehicle weighing 5,000 pounds."

B.C.'s Revived Tories

WHATEVER ELSE THE BRITish Columbia Conservative leadership convention in Vancouver may have disclosed, it has proved conclusively one point.

Party spirit, revived by the Diefenbaker inspiration, has restored Conservatism to the position of a vital force in provincial politics.

Mr. Howard Green, federal minister of public works, with a certain touch of convention enthusiasm, has told his provincial colleagues to look forward to forming British Columbia's next government. The suggestion is far from the unrealistic prospect it would have been a year or two ago. At that time the party had lost its last remaining representative in the Legislature and was riven by factionalism.

The recent trend provincially across Canada supports the idea. Mr. Duff Roblin's qualified success in Manitoba follows a pronounced swing to Conservatism. The Union Nationale's persistent return in Quebec, where that label is worn by the equivalent of a Conservative party, is matched by the Frost government's continued tenancy of office in Ontario. New Brunswick voted Conservative at the last poll, as did Nova Scotia.

Mr. Diefenbaker's voluminous coattails have been an effective transport to office which might quite possibly hurdle the Rocky Mountains.

The actual campaign for leadership at the convention was accompanied by the in-fighting characteristic of such events. Mr. Finlayson put forward his claims to retain his position. Dr. Kidd advanced arguments for his election. But while supporters of the two rivals practised the normal procedures to advance their respective champion's interests, the deep schism that had existed within the party seemed to have been closed.

To those outside the party itself, the emergence of a leadership contest this month was impressive chiefly on the basis of the calibre of principals engaged in it. Both enjoy a high measure of public respect. Each was entitled to the confidence earned by integrity and a sincere desire to serve both party and public.

What appeal resides in policies hammered out during the convention is a matter which can be determined only by the electors. It is apparent, however, from the size of the Vancouver gathering—from all parts of the province—that what the party is doing no longer is cause for a political yawn.

The Conservatives of British Columbia have served adequate notice that the party has risen from its sickbed, is progressing well through its convalescence and should be an able-bodied contender when the next provincial contest is called.

That is good news for this province.

The Democratic Method

WITH SIX-DAY RETAIL SHOPping legal in Victoria throughout the summer and the entire month of December, enforcement of Wednesday afternoon store closing during the remainder of the year has become little more than a gesture to regimentation. This is particularly the case now that 9 o'clock closing six days a week is imminent in Saanich.

The Wednesday-closing controversy has raged intermittently for the past six or seven years. The argument had more point before the days of fair employment practices legislation, when closing bylaws were necessary to ensure that staff members would receive their half-day holiday. But labor legislation long ago removed the need for such protection by municipal governments.

The half-day closing practice has hung on through habit, inertia and the efforts of some proprietors whose particular interests were served by having their competitors closed when they themselves wished to be closed.

Simple economics eventually forced the summer and Christmas-season full-week business schedule. The same arguments should apply to making the arrangement year-long.

Removal of the restrictions now going into effect for the fall season would at least make store operation voluntary. If a proprietor did not wish to remain open on Wednesday afternoon he would not be forced to do so. It is hardly just that those who do wish to remain open must remain closed at the behest of those who do not care to. Those who like to set a more leisurely business pace should not dictate to others who may prefer to work.

The Saanich experiment, apparently due for early implementation, will be watched with interest. With stores permitted to remain open until 9 p.m. every day except Sunday, proprietors will be able to make a free choice as to their working hours—which seems to be the sort of democratic arrangement one would expect in a democratic country.

'Spell of the Yukon'

ROBERT SERVICE IS DEAD and a generation which made him rich and famous pays its tribute to the memory of a man who rhymed his way into public affection.

"Don't call them poems," Service urged his friends when they discussed his verse. And poems they may not have been by critical standards. But the works of Robert Service, the stories of the Yukon, sometimes hilarious, sometimes oversentimental, sometimes edging into doggerel, caught contemporary fancy as few works in verse have done.

They pictured the northern gold frontier in terms which the reading public wanted, drew characters, stereotypes, which became familiar to millions, and presented them in words that swung along in rhythms and couplets understandable to all men.

A young man's imagination created Dan McGrew and Sam McGee, wove into other works the spell of lonely places, the theme of the remittance man, the home-hunger of the wanderer — and a receptive world eagerly took the imaginary personalities and the man who created them to its heart.

Victoria, which knew him in his early years, has been proud of its association with Robert Service. Its people join the host today who recall hours of enjoyable reading given to them by the man who played so effectively on the strings of sentiment.

Running Into Trouble

IT IS NOT SURPRISING THAT the United States has registered a strong protest against Canada's latest alteration in anti-dumping legislation, whereby the Government in Ottawa assumes wider powers to set the value of imports for duty purposes. Washington claims that this is a violation of the General Agreement on Tariffs and Trade which governs most of the world's commerce and has greatly benefited Canadian exports.

It is generally understood in international trade that goods which are sold abroad for less than their price in the country of origin are being "dumped." To meet this competition the importing country may base its customs duties, not on the artificially low price paid by the importer, but on a "fair market value" as represented by the prevailing price in the manufacturer's country.

The Canadian legislation departs from this practice. The Government will now be able to set a relatively arbitrary value for duty purposes by estimating the cost of production in the exporting country and adding what it considers to be a fair profit.

Obviously such a system leaves wide powers of discrimination to the Government. The principle of "fair market value" as based on prevailing price is seriously infringed.

This prospect the United States vigorously opposes — to the point where the U.S. Embassy in Ottawa has said use of the device against the United States would be considered as "very serious."

Actually, the new legislation appears to have British textile imports as the chief target, since British goods are specifically written into the anti-dumping measure. The regular tariff rates are apparently considered not sufficient in themselves to exclude the United Kingdom product.

Mr. Diefenbaker says the new measure is not in violation of GATT, that it is entirely legal. He may have arguments, as yet unrevealed, to support this view. But it will take all his persuasive eloquence to convince our U.S. neighbors, or the delegates who will gather Monday in Montreal for the Commonwealth conference on trade.

As Our Readers See It

Correction

Referring to your editorial of September 10, 1958, "Fire Lesson for B.C.," may I point out a glaring error.

You state that British Columbia was allocated an annual amount of $775,000 from the $5,000,000 earmarked by Ottawa for all the provinces.

In point of fact, both these figures are the totals for a five-year program. This means the correct comparison for the five-year period is $775,000 spent by the Federal Government versus $15,000,000 spent by the Province on forest protection in British Columbia. In addition, the Provincial Government, so far, has paid the entire cost of fire fighting which this year alone will be at least $4,500,000.

RAY WILLISTON,
Minister of Lands and Forests.

A Revolution Wrought by a Man Called Allen Lane

AT one end of a library where I used to read as an undergraduate were four books of a kind unusual today. Pound solidly with iron and chained to the ancient wall, they survived from a time when university education was a matter of too many scholars chasing too few books. Books then were scarce and costly; they were jealously guarded and kept well away from the general public. Today, in addition to drugs and notions and the best peanuts in the world, my friend Mr. Dalby offers to every customer in his pharmacy the works of Shakespeare, Butler's "Moral Philosophy," and scholarly works on psychology and economics, as well as a splendid selection of excellent fiction.

Emery

We should not take for granted this display of worthwhile books at a price everyone can afford; it is entirely due to a revolution wrought by a man called Allen Lane.

In 1935, Lane launched Penguin Books with little capital and less encouragement from the book trade, whose greybeards prophesied that he would go bankrupt in a few months. Booksellers, too, were hostile to the new venture. They could see no profit in selling a book for sixpence, and felt that cheap books would hurt the sales of higher-priced novels and biographies.

In the event, as so often happens, the experts were proved wrong. They had failed to take into account the effects of 60 years of compulsory free education in Britain.

The secondary schools had turned out thousands of people who were prepared to buy books if they were offered at a price they could afford to pay. A big market existed for good books at candy prices, and Allen Lane achieved fame, fortune and a knighthood, not bankruptcy, beggary and oblivion.

Not the least admirable feature of this improving tale is that Allen Lane remained unspoiled by success. He has continued to offer the best books for the least money; he has not descended to the huckstering methods adopted by some of his American imitators; he still searches for new good things to offer, and is not content to play safe by "giving the public what it wants," to use the cant phrase of the lily-livered mercenary.

In the education of people of my generation Allen Lane's Penguins and Pelicans have played a part quite as important as that of school or university.

We still cast an affectionate eye back to the bookshelves of our adolescence, where stood the swelling ranks in orange and blue. To most of us Freud was only a name until we read his "Psychopathology of Everyday Life" and "Totem and Taboo" in the Pelican edition. Our introduction to psychology and philosophy and philology, current affairs, aesthetics and political science was due, in many cases, to these sixpenny books.

And this was only the beginning. Penguin Books had begun as a producer of cheap reprints, but as the firm prospered Allen Lane commissioned books from writers, and sponsored a literary magazine and two scientific journals; he published music scores, and reproductions of famous works of art; he put out the beautifully illustrated King Penguin monographs, and the well-loved Puffin books for children.

The best—in some cases the only—cheap picture books dealing with individual contemporary painters are the Penguin Modern Painters. Herbert Read's "Meaning of Art" and "Contemporary British Painting," are both Pelicans; books by Roger Fry, J. M. Richards, Olive Bell and William Gaunt have also appeared in Penguin.

If you want the best short history of England you go to the Pelican History in seven volumes, each by a distinguished historian; if you are looking for a readable version of the Odyssey, or the plays of Aeschylus, the history of Herodotus, the philosophy of Plato, the poetry of Ovid or Chaucer, you can find it in Penguin for the price of a few cigarets.

If you feel the need of a handbook on beekeeping or dogs, or cooking; on soft fruit-growing, flower-arrangement or the art of marriage; on knitting, photography or the culture of the abdomen—then you need look no further. Penguin has all these and many others.

Nor is this all. The little factory at Harmondsworth also offers guidebooks, dictionaries, an atlas, the world's great poetry, and books on town planning. An ambitious departure is the stiff-covered, expensively-produced "Pelican History of Art," which aims to cover the whole history of art, though as yet only a dozen fat tomes have appeared.

I have not mentioned the familiar orange Penguins devoted to "Fiction and General," and it is not easy to know where to begin, so embarrassing are the riches.

Something is here for every taste. Angus Wilson and Denton Welch rub spines with Conrad and Trollope; Beerbohm jostles Bemelmans, Huxley with bony elbows parts Greene and D. H. Lawrence, and Menen nudges Maugham. The green crime and mystery covers conceal some classics of this popular genre by writers as diverse as Conan Doyle and Simenon and Charles Williams.

One rule covers all: there are no bad Penguins; only some that are better than others. A hundred books a year—good books—for the cost of a mild tobacco habit. How can you go wrong?

WHEN WE WERE VERY YOUNG — By GUS SIVERTZ

Over the Hill to Shawnigan and the Days of Long Ago

THERE just didn't seem to be any position that could possibly be as enviable and important as that of conductor on a railroad train. Maybe a ship captain had as good a job but when we were very young it appeared that a train conductor had more fun and perhaps more authority, although we learned later that this was not so. Anyhow there was the old Esquimalt & Nanaimo morning train all ready for its long run to Nanaimo; transfer wagons were bringing the last express parcels and the Royal Mail rig was pulling alongside the mail car; passengers sauntered along the platform pretending that this was just an everyday experience. At the head end the big locomotive was breathing noisily and puffing steam out like breath on a cold morning.

Sivertz

Last-minute passengers were running through the Store Street waiting room, dropping paper bundles and stopping in their stride to pick them up again only to have them spill out over the steps as they boarded the train. Women, they were mostly, and it seemed always that their hats got askew in their hurry.

Well, there was the conductor in his gold-buttoned uniform, just as calm as you please, nodding a good morning to the regulars and to the commercial travellers. Then he would take out his watch, a good big, solid one, look at it carefully and then yell: "All-l-l-aboar-r-r-d.

Now the late ones scurried down the platform, groups of hunters broke up and the conductor swung up the steps to yank the signal cord which let the engineer know it was time to pull out. If a tug and boom was waiting to get through the bridge it would just have to wait. Mr. Carrall wasn't opening the swing span at train time, no sir.

I stood on the back platform as the tracks unrolled in two steel ribbons behind us and people one didn't know waved and smiled so you waved back and sure enough, you were on a train ride . . . faster and faster . . . clickety-click as the wheels ran over the switch points, and clanked over the level crossings at Esquimalt Road, Lampson Street and Admirals Road.

The whistle seemed to be sounding almost steadily and when the train crossed the roads horses would go near crazy and stand up on their hind legs while the drivers soothed them and held them close-curbed.

As the train skimmed along Esquimalt harbor you could look right down on the slick grey-painted naval vessels and into the graving basin across the water. But it was a quick glimpse because the old "locie" was now rolling along and passed over the highway bridge at the bottom of Four-Mile Hill with a dandy roar and then straightened out for the run to Langford.

There was only a short pause at Langford and the conductor stepped down to the platform with his watch in his hand like maybe he was in a hurry to get going.

The first real stop was at Goldstream because here was a fine hotel with gardens and an orchard and, if he could find out how much express was to be dropped at Goldstream, a fast man could sprint over to the saloon bar and hoist a very quick one and race back to swing aboard the moving train.

It never was moving very fast as it left Goldstream because it was entering the Sooke Hills and the grade got steeper pretty quickly. Here the train sort of lost itself among the rocky ledges and ravines and the whistle woke echoes from the surrounding hills until it broke cover and swung around 17-mile post through the only tunnel on the whole line.

It wasn't much of a tunnel, maybe a hundred yards long, but it was still quite a thrill to a boy going through it for the first time. Now the train was scooting pretty well down hill toward Shawnigan Lake and the wheel flanges screamed on the rails as it flashed through the lovely autumn countryside.

Soon the shining waters of the lake broke through the trees and children in lakeside cottages waved to the passing train roaring down to the huge, swank, wide-verandahed Strathcona Hotel.

The station platform held its quota of train watchers and I swung down among them just as though this incredible thrill was something that happened every day and was really just a bit of a bore. And I stood on the platform even after the conductor had shouted his "all-l-l-aboar-r-r-d" and swung up as nonchalantly as anything as the train was actually moving.

The fireman was busy again and smoke rolled back over the train, black and gritty on the red plush seats as it rushed, swaying around curves for Koenigs at the north end of the lake.

The air brakes hissed and the cars butted into one another as we slid into a stop in front of the red painted Koenigs Hotel, standing solid, squat and firm above its green lawns. Kindly, bustling Mrs. Koenig welcomed her half-dozen guests and herded them into her hospitable hostel.

It was the end of my train journey and many years were to elapse before the country beyond ceased to be a terra incognita.

I watched the train pull out and disappear toward Cobble Hill before I swung down the winding, leaf-strewn and still dusty road to Mill Bay.

FROM TAIPEH, FORMOSA — By JOSEPH ALSOP

Danger of the Now-or-Never Philosophy Applied to Quemoy

AT first smell, the atmosphere here is not eve-of-battle like. The hope is that the Chinese Communists will finally content themselves with seizing one or more of the rocky islets, such as Tungting, which are not on the Washington "must defend" list of offshore islands. If this is the outcome, the crisis in the Formosa Strait will finally simmer down into a relatively harmless fire of propaganda claims and counter claims. But even if we get off this cheaply, no one should forget for an instant that the American armed services intended to use nuclear weapons to defend Quemoy and the Matsus.

Alsop

That is the present intention. That is what is going to happen if we are drawn into serious fighting here, unless Secretary of State John Foster Dulles persuades or forces the Pentagon leaders to change their plans.

Dulles is convinced that a firm stand must be made. But Dulles is also convinced that everything possible should be done to avoid fighting a nuclear war for Quemoy.

Yet Dulles will have his work cut out for him to prevent the use of nuclear weapons, if his firm stand brings American forces into the fight. For one thing, the armed services have strong arguments on their side. They have been gravely weakened for budgetary reasons. And this weakness has been theoretically compensated for by presidential directives authorizing the use of nuclear weapons in almost any sort of fighting.

For another thing, the defence planning based on these directives has deeply influenced service thinking. One is told that tactical nuclear weapons "would really have to be used" for the simple task of interdicting the Communist airfields on the mainland which most directly threaten the offshore islands.

Yet the much more numerous North Korean airfields were perfectly successfully interdicted with the conventional weapons, despite the rule against attacks beyond the Yalu.

Again, one is told, with better logic, that it is "unthinkable" for American ground forces to confront the formidable Chinese Communist ground forces without using nuclear weapons. Yet the area of interest is Fukien Province, a natural land island, largely cut off from the rest of China by surrounding mountains and easy to defend once it is taken.

For just these reasons, an American landing in Fukien was by no means unthinkable in the last war. In fact, it was actually planned, although the Japanese armies in Asia were also fairly formidable.

In other words, the practice has grown up of saying "we can't do this, we can't do that," when the speakers really mean that it will be too expensive or too painful to do these things.

But surely it is an extraordinary delusion to think that there will be anything inexpensive or painless about a nuclear war with the chief ally of the Soviet Union, when the Kremlin already possesses a plentiful stock of nuclear weapons of all types.

On this head there are important technical arguments to consider. One of these arguments concerns the gain or loss to us of using nuclear weapons, if the continent-based Chinese forces are given similar weapons to use against us.

Another argument concerns the effect on the Western alliance of a nuclear war starting on Quemoy. Still another argument concerns the effect on our own nuclear striking power, if our allies deny us the use of our overseas airbases for such a war, and thus cripple the 80 per cent of Strategic Air Command squadrons that are equipped with medium range bombers.

But it is clear that these technical arguments are being lightly weighed. It is clear, in fact, that all the Pentagon thinking about the use of nuclear weapons in this wretched conflict is dominated by the conviction that the nuclear striking power of the United States is still superior to the nuclear striking power of the Soviet Union.

This is true, of course. We are now near the end, but we have not reached the end of the period of the American lead. We are now close to the period, but we have not yet entered the period when our defence plans will flaccidly permit the Soviets to acquire an enormous superiority in nuclear striking power.

There are strong indications that certain key figures in the armed services have just these grim facts very much on their minds. Hence they are not averse to having a nuclear showdown now. If such a showdown is tragically inevitable, it is certainly better to have it now than later. To this extent, this view is logical.

But it is altogether illogical to suppose we are going to get round the next corner after that, if we get safely round this corner of the offshore islands.

The leaders of the government and the leaders of the services may tell themselves they are going to be very bold and firm in the future. But they are lying to themselves. They will not be bold and firm about such issues as the offshore islands, and they will not risk nuclear war for much more important issues either, when the Soviets have been allowed to gain commanding superiority in nuclear striking power.

Any fool can foresee that much. At a minimum therefore, this offshore island crisis is a glaring revelation of the bind we are in. It should also be taken as final proof of the need to make the greatest and most urgent efforts to escape from this bind, by radically altered and boldly expanded defence plans.

BEFORE THE JUDGE

By SILENUS

Opening Day

THE sporting fraternity has its opening day, when various birds become fair game for the marksman; likewise the legal brotherhood. The lawyers' opening day is the day when the Court of Appeal commences the work of the legal year by having a general sorting out of cases in Victoria. There is not much essential difference between the two openings: both are devoted to shooting down fast-moving flying objects. But attendance at both of these occasions convinces the observer that judges, when it comes to avoiding shot and shell, are a great deal more adroit than grouse.

SILENUS

The game, in the Court of Appeal, is in the attempt to have one's case heard far along toward the end of the sitting. The benefits which accrue to the advocate who can accomplish this desired end are many.

Not only has he got plenty of time to prepare his argument, but the judges are generally supposed to grow more mellow and expansive as the weeks spent living in Victoria soothe and calm the Vancouver-jangled nerves. There are even some lawyers who hold that a prolonged sojourn under our balmy skies induces a torpidity which is helpful to a weak case. As to this, a respectable column is not in any position to express an opinion.

On opening day a full bench of judges devotes itself to parrying good reasons and warding off excuses. This requires much skill and experience, for the judges are faced with cunning and a deadly eye. At the end of the day the list of appeals finds itself comfortably re-arranged, with the inexperienced lawyers on first and the old hands' cases comfortably pigeonholed in the distant future. Perhaps it is just as well; the neophytes must work hard, and their lordships, if perhaps not as easygoing as they are blieved to become later in the season, are not so apt to become bored.

Opening day this year was particularly notable in that it marked the first appearance here, in his official capacity, of the Chief Justice of British Columbia.

The local Bar turned out in force to welcome Chief Justice DesBrisay. His appointment to this high office, vacant for too long, brought with it the good wishes of all who know this capable, conscientious and learned lawyer; and his debut in the old courtroom where the Court of Appeal had its beginnings was the occasion for more warm enthusiasm than these tired old eyes have seen in a long time.

It is right and proper for a new judge to be assured of the good wishes of the Bar in a formal way; and here in British Columbia new judges have always had more than that. In their new chief justice the people (and the lawyers) have the learning, the humanity and the wisdom born of experience which the office demands; long may he sit in judgment over us.

It is no sinecure being a chief justice. As president of the court, he takes the central seat. All eyes are fixed upon him. A man thus circumstanced finds it well nigh impossible to retreat into slumber when things get tedious.

LONDON LETTER

Catch-Phrase Fame

LONDON—Names make news . . .

Bernard Bresslaw—He's a new comedian who had an overnight-type leap to fame and it's all based on a catch-phrase. This riding to success on a catch-prase is a frequent thing for entertainers in this country, because the English love them so.

Reyburn

The public here will sit through a radio, TV or music hall show just waiting for a comedian to repeat some phrase that will throw them into gales of laughter, regardless of any real humor content.

Arthur Askey did it before the war with his "I thank yooh!" There's a present-day comedian people roar with laughter at when he says "I hate you."

During the war that most popular of all radio shows, ITMA, had so many recurring catch-phrases that there wasn't much time left each week for other dialogue, three of them being, "can I do you now, sir?" "I don't mind if I do" and "don't forget the diver."

Bernard Bresslaw's phrase is, "Well, I only arsked," and you can't get far into any day now without somebody repeating it. A small-time actor, he got the part of a brow-beaten soldier in the television series The Army Game and his hurt response to being bawled out has endeared him to the public.

So much so that he has been snapped-up for guest appearances on other shows, will star in a pantomime and has now been given an hour-long TV show all to himself.

Whether or not he is funny you'll be able to judge for yourselves shortly, because Bernard Bresslaw movies will be on their way to you soon.

Garfield Weston—Just how big in England is this Canadian big businessman? Apart from his biscuits, being Britain's biggest supermarket operator, margarine, owning the Fortnum and Mason store, etc., etc., I learn that one in ten of all the loaves of bread that the British eat is a Weston product.

Lieut.-Commander N. S. Norway (real name of Nevil Shute) has apologized for writing "In the Wet," the novel which he brought out just before the Coronation and in which he inferred Britain had had it and the Royal Family would pack up and go off to live in one of the dominions.

Back in this country on holiday from Australia, where he migrated in 1950 to escape Socialism, he is amazed at all the recovery Britain has made from the setback of the Socialists being in power.

Says he: "I was wrong to write that Britain was facing disaster. I had forgotten the resilience of my own race. Britain sparkles with optimism now."

Tyrone Power, filming here, has explained those frequent and fabulous amounts paid in Hollywood to divorcees: "None of us could afford to get divorced if it were not for the fact that alimony is tax deductible. If you have to pay out $50,000 a year to a former wife, it means that in actual cash you pay about $5,000."

Job Situation Fails to Rally

Strikes, depressed condition of the shipyard industry, and "general labor unrest" is retarding any improvement in the employment picture in this area, National Employment Office officials reported today.

On the other hand, they said, opening of the woods and activity in the construction industry prevented the situation from deteriorating over the past week.

Total male unemployed fell by 80 to 2,469 while females out of work increased by 46 to 1,142.

Coldwell Urges Neutral Formosa Under UN Control

One way out of the present Far East crisis would be to place Formosa in the position of a neutral island under the aegis of the United Nations, CCF leader M. J. Coldwell told Victoria Men's Canadian Club Friday.

Mr. Coldwell said he did not know how the Chinese or the United States would react to his idea, but he thought that Canada in her role of mediator might propose something along these lines.

"It would be worth while if we could help bring about a situation that would benefit everyone."

Mr. Coldwell pointed out that one-quarter of the world's population is on the China mainland.

"By our policies over the last few years it seems we have been driving the Chinese (Communist) government away from us and closer to Russia."

He believed that any war which involved China and the United States must inevitably involve Canada. Canadian neutrality would be impossible since Canada's northland is ringed with U.S. defence bases.

Describing his recent visit to the Brussels world exposition, Mr. Coldwell said Russia's exhibit presented a picture of her tremendous advances in science and education over the past 40 years.

"The only thing that did not impress me were the consumer goods—civilian clothing in particular appeared to be rather shoddy."

The Day YOU Were Born

Stanley

Stanley must have a way with animals because he has managed to keep for a whole year in the same house, one white mouse and three cats! He is a Grade 6 student at Quadra School and assembles model planes and ships in his spare time.

On the day he was born:

Three major meat packers were strike-bound, and a serious meat shortage loomed in Canada. The United Packing House Workers sought a wage increase of 17 cents to bring their basic hourly wage up to 93 cents.

The hunting season opened and Rob Dalziel shot a buck deer early in the day back of Shawnigan Lake.

Saanich and Oak Bay were criticized for not helping veterans build houses for their families. Both municipalities had been asked repeatedly to enter into conctracts with the Wartime Housing, but had flatly refused each time.

Victoria Model Airplane League was preparing for an all-day contest with over 60 model aircraft entered. Contestants included six boys from Fairbridge Farm Schools.

Robert Price, sea cadet, returned from a tour of Great Britain full of excitement and stories of meetings with celebrities and ordinary warm-hearted English people. Robert was a member of the Rainbow Corps.

Rear Admiral Sir David Lambert and Lady Lambert were visitors in the city.

The date? Saturday, September 13, 1947.

ART IN REVIEW — By MONCRIEFF WILLIAMSON

Integrity of Criticism To Retain Top Priority

Well, we have our Centennial Gallery!

Now we must learn to use and enjoy it. The municipalities of Greater Victoria, the Provincial government and the Greater Victoria Centennial Committee have provided the city with an art gallery which holds its own when compared with other art centres in North America.

Williamson

The two main exhibition rooms are not only delightfully proportioned, they are illuminated by the very latest techniques for light diffusion. In too many galleries, the problem of good lighting is skimped — but not so the Centennial Gallery.

The Curator, the architects and the lighting consultant, Mr. John Morrison, have produced a system of flexible lighting which is not only ideal for the works on view, but will no doubt serve as a model for other galleries still lagging behind Victoria.

When I say we must learn to use and enjoy our art gallery I am thinking of the queues I saw recently outside the Vancouver Art Gallery.

I don't recommend queuing as a pastime for anybody, but certainly the daily attendances at the Moss Street Art Centre should double their present figures — already high for a community such as this. A tea room is being prepared in the Spencer mansion by the Women's Committee, and those who are free to do so should make a habit of using it as a meeting-place for friends.

Reviews Coming

Next week we will be discussing the two important exhibitions which are being opened today and will be on view till September 28.

Two Centuries of Canadian Painting, specially prepared by the National Gallery, Ottawa, as their contribution to the Centennial Gallery festivities, and the display of New Gifts (Part I).

And here I must write on a personal subject; a subject which I consider it advisable to tackle before taking over my duties as director of education and extension services. I refer to art criticism in this column of exhibitions organized at the Art Gallery of Greater Victoria.

Outwardly, it would appear that I serve two masters, the Art Gallery and the Victoria Times. In fact, and let's be perfectly clear about this, my first consideration will continue to be the interests of art itself.

If an exhibition is on view and I wish to point out its flaws, even to the extent of advising you against visiting it, then I shall not hesitate to do so.

This is not without precedent. I can provide a list of people connected with art galleries who are also art critics for the local press, and who have been very outspoken indeed in their efforts to extend the field of art appreciation within their districts.

No Excuses Now

In the past, Victoria has had to survive several drear, low-quality art displays with the ready excuse that first-class exhibitions must by-pass this city because the exhibition premises were not fireproof. This excuse no longer holds and it is the duty of all of us to see that in future such displays get no further than the planning board.

Nobody is happier about this than Colin Graham who this week sees the fulfilment of the first stage of his projected art centre. It is he, supported by his executive committee, who must continue to bear full brunt of exhibitions which fall short of standards of quality or excellence.

Free to Criticize

It is, therefore, with his permission that I am clarifying my own position as art critic. Being in no way connected with the organization of exhibitions for the Centennial Gallery, I shall continue to criticize to the best of my ability.

Opening on Sept. 30th will be a display of 36 of the finest paintings by Emily Carr which will be on view concurrently with paintings of Mexico by Andres Salgo, an exhibition touring Canada under auspices of the Mexican government.

Next month will see the first of two exhibitions of Old Masters from B.C. collections, and the Vancouver Art Galler's permanent collection and from private collections on Vancouver Island.

And so the new wing gets under way. We wish it well!

BOOK TALK — By JAMES SCOTT

Big Business Still Villain Only Victim Has Changed

I have just finished reading a book which had as its subtitle "the hidden terror in big business" and on reflection I have been struck by the change which has come over writers and their attitudes to "business" since the Second World War.

SCOTT

Many people can remember the iconoclastic fiction of the thirties. Those were depression years and in times of hardship everybody is looking for a goat. Big business was the most convenient goat at hand and thousands and thousands of words rolled off the presses deploring the plight of the little man as he was pushed around by the big moguls and tycoons of business. Those were the days when almost everybody numbered among his acquaintances at least one Communist or Communist sympathizer. Social revolt was in the air because men and women were out of work and going hungry and business was generally recognized as the culprit.

But the times change. Even with recession, we have raised a generation which has never known want. The inflation spiral keeps on going up; wages are higher and higher; fringe benefits are greater; you can be insured against unemployment. Now the authors (and apparently few authors ever like big business) have to find another sin to lay on the doorstep of the tycoons. Since the so-called working man is no longer suffering the writers have turned to somebody else.

Here is a story, written with fond attention to detail, about a young man who was quite willing to pit his capacity for ruthlessness against the known ruthlessness of big business.

It is no longer the worker whom the tycoons tyrannize, but the upcoming young executives, the man in the gray flannel suits.

According to this book (and to a whole crop of similar ones) there most definitely is a big company look. If you don't get looking like that, you're out. Among the white collar workers a new tyranny has developed. It judges a man's life in every detail; he has no privacy; no initiative; no freedom to expand as an individual human being.

Instead, he is expected to marry the kind of girl the company heads consider to be "right"; he dresses, eats, has fun, relaxes all according to the company prescription. And even then he is likely to lose his job at a moment's notice if some rival is a little smarter than he is.

PRECARIOUS STATE

In short, what The Big Company Look says is that the cut-throat life of today's big companies, even though it may pay the highest wages in the world, is the most precarious, the most uneasy and the most confining a man can find anywhere.

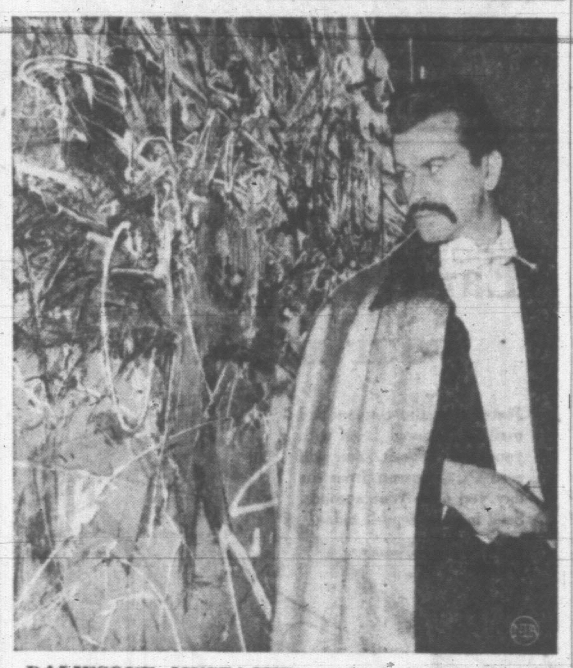

This is serious indictment of big business, North American style. I would not be too impressed if this were an isolated example but it has been going on in contemporary fiction for a long while. It started right after World War II with The Hucksters and since that time, big business has been consistently assailed, bombarded and attacked from every side.

The Big Company Look is merely another such book, but it seems to sum up all the attacks. As fiction it is passable and no more. Thoroughly readable, expressed in rather pedestrian prose, but with a theme which is very important to today's world, especially to the North American economy.

So often, fiction has predicted what can come about. The workers did indeed arise and today the unions are as strong (and as subject to all the hazards of too much power) as the executives.

What will happen if the white collar workers arise too? Will they go through an ordeal such as is described in this book, yield to the pressures as Jackson Pollett (the book's hero) did only to find himself rejected at the end? Maybe this will happen once too often.

Anyway, if I were a top flight executive I would be starting to worry about all these tales. They may be prophetic.

AUTHOR, AUTHOR

King Arthur With Humor

THE ONCE AND FUTURE KING, by T. H. White (Putnam): King Arthur, a minor English or Welsh monarch who probably gave the Saxon invaders a pretty rough time back in the sixth century, has captured the literary fancy of the western world as few other persons in history.

White's contributions over the past 20 years to the growing mass of Arthurian literature are now united under one title. White's version of the King Arthur story is embellished with shafts of satire and outrageously funny humor.

An inspiring and exciting account of physical and spiritual adventure with the beauty —and distortion—of a medieval tapestry.

Zoo Business No Monkey Biz For Photograher

HOLD THAT TIGER by Sam Dunton. Ambassador Book Ltd., Toronto. 188 pages. $4.95.

Sam Dunton, staff photographer of the New York Zoological Society, tells of some of the thrilling experiences he has had—including injuries he has suffered, in more than 25 years of taking pictures of wild animals.

A number of his best photographs and several pages of technical data add interest to the book.

The author is dedicated to his work. "Show people like to say there's no business like show business," he observes, "but I long ago came to the conclusion that there's none either like or as exciting as zoo business."

He succeeds in conveying his enthusiasm to readers as he takes them backstage at the zoo and tells them how he secured some of his outstanding pictures. His book will not only interest amateurs but prove of value to professional photographers.—T.M.

Puzzled Hero

THE SOUND OF THE SUN, by Margaret Cobb Shipley (Doubleday): Joe Brandt is a fiction writer's favorite, a man who can't make up his mind.

As a foreign correspondent in Greece he is decisive, competent and well liked. But his private life is torn between his wife and his Greek mistress. His wife's arrival from America with their two small sons creates a situation that could become maudlin in less talented hands.

SOMETHING DIFFERENT in adult choral concerts is promised Victorians when the Vienna Academy Chorus comes to the city as first of the Famous Artists' series, 1958-59. The three-part program presents, as well as great choral literature, Viennese music in Viennese dress, and Austrian folksongs, dances and yodels in Tyrolean costumes. Concert date at Royal Theatre is Oct. 29. Box office opens at Kent's, Fort Street, Monday.

Top Talent for Symphony; Gruber to Conduct Six Events

Six well-known guest artists plus guest conductors, Sir Ernest MacMillan and Henry Plukker, will be featured in Victoria Symphony Orchestra's ensuing season of 10 subscription concerts.

True to established tradition, the six soloists will all be Canadian musicians who have established enviable reputations both at home and abroad.

In addition to the two guest conductors, assistant conductor and concert master, Clifford Evens, will be on the podium for two of the concerts.

Hans Gruber, who earlier planned to conduct a minimum number of concerts in order to take time out for study, will now definitely be conducting the remaining six events.

The following schedule is arranged for quick reference and clip-out by Times readers wishing to keep up to date on the programs:

TESTING

Director Henry King is trying to find out whether coffee or tea is better for pepping up people. He has asked members of the cast and crew of "The Bravados" to drink either coffee or tea—just one of them. The group, in Mexico on location, gets two beverages during meal times and breaks. "Actors always want to know how to increase their efficiency," he said. "Maybe we'll find out something from this experiment."

EXPENSIVE PRODUCTION

Yul Brynner says he will spend $5,500,000 to produce "The Gladiators." The picture will be made on location in Italy and Greece.

CURRENT CHOICE

Curtain Going Up On Play Season

By AUDREY St.D. JOHNSON

Did someone say Victoria wasn't theatre-minded?

If so, it becomes hard to credit the truth of the statement in the face of the season's opening entertainment schedule.

Three plays within less than a month! Three different dramatic groups.

But of course that's only half the story. It remains to be seen how hearty the public appetite is for these offerings.

An audience contributes a lot more than dollars—in fact, practically 50 per cent of the aesthetic value of any production.

Comedies are currently in command of the situation. A generally welcome state of affairs, though it is to be hoped some brave souls will shortly come up with something to vary the pace.

Dead Duck

St. Luke's Players tee off on Sept. 19 with a perennial favorite of the last decade, "The Chiltern Hundreds." It's an English comedy that can smell under certain circumstances—and not only in the figurative sense.

However we are definitely assured there will be no odor to this production—either way.

The property dead duck, for instance. It won't be a "real live" dead duck this time but a very convincing dummy—the handiwork of member Susan Gibson.

Time was, in a certain production of the "Hundreds" when a duck, long overdue for its last resting place, sent actors reeling from the stage to seek the fresh air, along about the third or fourth performance.

Cast of the St. Luke's production, which is being directed by Cmdr. Harry Lukey, has both talent and experience to set a fine pace. Stan Wade as the inimitable Beecham, Charles Gibson and Evanne Murray as Lord and Lady Lister, and Margaret Martin, among others should be convincing enough reason for going to the play to anyone who has seen their work formerly.

"Chiltern Hundreds" will play two nights at Oak Bay Junior High School and two at St. Luke's Parish Hall. (See Entertainment Calendar for details).

St. Luke's plans Priestley's "Laburnum Grove" as its second production.

★ ★ ★

'Original'

"The Laird's Wooin'," next on the list, Sept. 23, 24, is an original comedy with a Scottish twinkle to match the twinkle in author Laura MacBride's eye.

This dynamic lady is producing and directing the show as well. In addition she has taken on the slight additional hazard of doing it for a brand new group—the St. Andrew's and Caledonian Society Drama Group.

LAURA McBRIDE
. . . Scottish twinkle

Replacement

Unavoidable casting changes have assailed the Theatre Guild production of another comedy, "The Little Hut," but these are working themselves out we are told by director Lesley Allen.

Anabel Cranstoun has replaced Carol MacCormac as the female lead. Ken Bostock, Cliff Clarke and Karl Wylie are the men in the case.

Production will start Oct. 11 at Langham Court Theatre.

A (Don't Miss) AA (Oscar Class) B (For Rainy Days) BB (Worthwhile) C (To put in time)

(OSCAR CLASS) "THE KEY" (Odeon): — Columbia released but English-made, this story of the men who heroically sailed the little unarmed tugs into the war-ravaged Atlantic off the British coast to tow back the burning hulks that had been the targets of the screaming Stukas and the torpedoes of the U-boats, conceivably might be this year's "Bridge on the River Kwai."

One American actor is in it, William Holden, who was also in "Kwai." As the U.S. volunteer in the Canadian forces who is released to the tugboats because of his previous experience with this type of craft, his acting is of high order. But just as he was overshadowed by the virtuosity of Alec Guinness last year so he is in "The Key" by that magnificent English thespian Trevor Howard.

However, this should be in no sense thought of as a rivalry for they are all lost in the macabre, breathless quality of the play itself. "The Key," is based on a novel by Jan de Hartog, the screenplay being the work of Carl Foreman, the producer.

Thanks to the excellence of the direction by Carol Reed the picture fairly breathes life as the cameras pick up the movement of the littered jetties, the battered ships and the careless slouch of tired men carrying on almost beyond endurance.

Better still, thanks to the skill of the direction, the black-and-white camera work and the art of the actors, both stars and minor parts, "The Key" delineates war as few pictures have. It catches the spirit of the men, the bravery that overrides fear, the steel courage before and during the attack, that dissolves into weak vomitings over the rail in the calm that follows.

THERE ARE THE DEATHS, of course, ashore and afloat, the over-doses of sleeping pills, the wild, drunken moments when the soul doesn't want to be heard but only demands to be forgotten. Tugboat skipper Howard, however, has his own way of forgetting — Sophia Loren with whom he lives in a little flat, his private reason for wanting to come back again alive after each operation.

But Howard isn't Sophia's first affair. Her first was also a tugboater killed on the eve of their wedding. She's just there to supply comforts of the body and soul for those in the same line who come back. Howard himself got the key to the flat from the captain of another craft which "bought it." In his turn he has another key made for Holden, making him promise that should anything happen to him that he will take over the flat and treat the girl with gentleness, understanding and respect.

SOPHIA LOREN

WILLIAM HOLDEN
. . . overshadowed

This is the part of the story that makes "The Key" the sterling film it is. It, the thread of life between men and women at war, is somehow symbollic of love's greatness and war's hatefulness. It does, indeed, illustrate the cycle of man since man came to earth.

There is action as well, of course. When the tugs go on their heroic missions it is this action that supplies the brass for the breathing simplicity and wistfulness of the woodwinds and the muted strings in the symphony of life that so often promises so much and gives so little.

ROUNDLY APPLAUDED

Runaway Grofe Forced Family To Agree to Musical Career

By HUMPHRY DAVY

I was surprised to learn on reading the program notes of Columbia's new recording of Ferde Grofe's popular Grand Canyon Suite of the difficult time the American composer had in becoming a musician.

In 1906 at the age of 14, he ran away from home because his family would not permit him to study music. He wandered for three years, working at various jobs, such as pressman, an elevator operator and milkman. At times he was penniless and was obliged to play the piano at hotels to pay his bills.

Davy

It was only when his family decided to encourage him in his musical studies that he returned home.

I wondered what chance a boy of today would have in repeating such an adventure. With school, juvenile and welfare acts, plus federal statutes, he wouldn't stand a chance of wondering further than Nanaimo.

★ ★ ★

The new recording of the Grand Canyon Suite is performed by the Philadelphia Orchestra with Eugene Ormandy, conducting. It's a flawless performance and one of the best I've ever heard.

This work was composed in 1932 and was performed for the first time by Paul Whiteman and his orchestra. It became a favorite of many B.C. schools. The movement "On the Trail," was often used as a lively introduction to musical studies.

★ ★ ★

Among this month's new releases is an Epic recording of the music of Wagner. Selections include The Flying Dutchman — overture; Tristan and Isolde—prelude and Liebestod; Die Meistersinger von Nurnberg—prelude to Act I, Prelude to Act III; Tannhauser—overture.

This is good value for your money as the disc contains the most popular selections of the works of Wagner. They are performed by the Symphony Orchestra of the Bavarian Radio with Eugen Jochum, conducting.

TOMORROW'S TOP TUNES

A new one from Andy Williams, "Promise Me Love," is a sure-fire. It has a cute lyric. And sings some close harmony, backed by a soft chorus. There's an appealing lilt to the arrangement. Kay Thompson wrote the number. (Cadence).

One man's reaction to rock 'n' roll music is summed up in the lyrics of Bobby Hendricks' "Itchy Twitchy Feeling." Bobby's vocal is slightly frantic, but so is the orchestration. It's a typical big-beat entry. (Sue).

Of the three versions of the dirge-tempoed "You Cheated," the Shields' entry has finally stepped forward and claimed leadership. Their version is full-bodied, and has a choral setting for the lead tenor's plaintive cries. (Dot).

Gordon MacRae's "The Secret" is spreading like wildfire. It is a simple ballad with soft romantic sentiments. Although a chorus and orchestra are used in the arrangement, a steel-string guitar, sounding like a banjo, acts as the lead background voice. This disc is a honey. (Capitol).

Jerry Wallace has a doozie with "How the Time Passes." Utilizing just about every vocal trick in the book, Jerry makes an arrangement that is a show-stopper. Jerry gets off his message successfully in spite of the choral competition. (Challenge).

Continuing his rock 'n' roll portraits of girl friends, Chuck Berry immortalizes "Carol," as his follow-up to "Beautiful Delilah." It's a hard rock beat with Chuck's energetic eight-to-the bar guitar spelling out the notes for the forceful vocal. (Class).

A year ago we predicted the return of jazz to the pop field. Cozy Cole's new "Topsy I and II" is pure jazz and it's climbing as though it were rock 'n' roll. His articulate drum calls the easy beat in the style of the late Chick Webb; then his group picks up the tune. Guitar, clarinet, and unique instrumental solos highlight this double-sided masterpiece. Side II, the more popular, features one of the best drum solos we have heard since Cab Calloway used to feature Cozy with his old group. This is a real gasser. (Love).

TWO DOWN

Audiences aren't the only ones jolted by horror pictures. Two extras and a visitor fainted on the set of Allied Artists' "Frankenstein-1970" and had to be revived by a physician. The scenes responsible for the faints were of Boris Karloff as a mad atomic age scientist going to work on his victims in a laboratory. Dr. Samuel Schenck, on the set as technical adviser, handled the fainting cases.

AUTOBIOGRAPHY

Sullivan To Telecast From Alaska

By WILLIAM EWALD

NEW YORK (UPI) — CBS-TV's Ed Sullivan will telecast one of his Sunday shows in November from Fairbanks, Alaska—he hopes to bring it in live . . . SBS-TV's "Robin Hood" will be switched from Monday night to Saturday morning on Oct. 4.

Noel Willman, an Irish actor, landed the lead role in "The Count of Monte Cristo," a "Du Pont Show of the Month" set for Oct. 28 . . . CBS-TV's "The Last Work" will be yanked off after Sept. 21 and replaced by "Primer On Politics" — "The Last Word" probably will return early in 1959.

NBC-TV will offer more than 600 hours of color shows this season. Among the shows that will be colorcast will be the new Milton Berle show. NBC-TV also will colorcast all World Series games played in New York and four Saturday college football games.

CBS-TV is planning a Doug Edwards 15-minute news show for Sunday afternoons starting Sept. 28 . . . ABC-TV will launch two Sunday afternoon shows in October—"Bowling Stars" and "The Paul Winchell Show."

The defunct "Dotto" cleaned up the last of its business one morning last week during the telecast of CBS-TV's "Top Dollar," the show that replaced it. "Dotto" had offered to home viewers a complete kitchen plus 700 pounds of frozen beef and on "Top Dollar" a winner was picked out of a batch of post cards from 55 mail bags. The winner was B. Lancaster of Erie, Pa.

Steve Lawrence left for the army and Fort Dix, N.J. For a time it was thought Steve might get a deferment because of a bad back. . . . Bing Crosby will do a take-off on Perry Como's "Letters" routine on Crosby's first spectacular for ABC-TV Oct. 1. . . . Ted Mack's amateur hour has landed a Sunday afternoon berth on CBS-TV.

CBS-TV's "Keep Talking" will be continued through the winter with Carl Reiner as emcee —it'll be shifted on Sept. 30 to the Tuesday spot that was to be filled by "Invisible Man."

Bob Hope, Top Cast Star in 'Roberta' Friday Night at 8

'Pied Piper of Hamelin' Tuesday; Dead Sea Scrolls Report Wednesday

The trend to new shows continues this coming week, although slowly. Highlight, however, must be considered to be "Roberta," a musical that will hug Channel 4 for 90 minutes Friday night starting at 8. On Channels 6 and 2 it will get under way half an hour later.

FOR COMMUTERS

C of C Asks Early Ferry

GANGES—An early run by the ferry Geo. S. Pearson to permit workers on Salt Spring Island to commute to Vancouver Island will be sought by Salt Spring Island Chamber of Commerce.

The chamber has called a public meeting for Tuesday at Mahon Hall here to discuss possible changes in the ferry's schedule on the Vesuvius-Crofton service.

The chamber will ask the highways department to repair or rebuild the bridge east of Fulford on the main highway. A load limit on the bridge at present is causing a hardship, members have been told.

It also will press for government development of the lookout on Stewart Road. Roads committee reported all unpaved roads on the island in bad condition, mainly because all public works equipment had been on Galiano Island for the summer.

Work done under chamber auspices included erection of direction signs to Maxwell Park by R. Lee and placing of welcome signs at Vesuvius and Crofton by Jake Barker.

Lumber Shipment Figures Reflect Dockers' Strike

CHEMAINUS—The longshoremen's strike, which has prevented waterborne shipment of lumber and pulp from the ports of Chemainus and Crofton since Aug. 21, shows up in statistics released by the customs office.

Only 10,275,237 board feet of lumber was shipped from local ports last month, a drop of nearly 6,000,000 feet from the total of the previous month. Pulp shipments from Crofton totalled 2,842 tons, less than half shipped in July.

Lumber shipments last month in board feet were: U.S.A., 4,773,754; South Africa, 1,885,000; U.K., 1,786,322; Puerto Rico, 1,112,370; Australia, 712,791.

Pulp shipments from B.C. Forest Products' Crofton pulp mill were: U.S.A., 1,570 tons; Europe, 1,122 tons; South Africa, 150 tons.

Fatality Trial

NANAIMO—John Morwood Caird, Duncan, will appear in Fall Assize Court Monday on a charge of criminal negligence arising out of the traffic death March 5 near Duncan of Mrs. William Wallace.

ISLAND DIGEST

PORT ALBERNI (CP)—New courses in automobile driving, radio, boat building, cooking and law, will be included in the city's most extensive night school program beginning Oct. 1.

Boom in Culture Forseen for B.C.

PORT ALBERNI (CP)—Dr. John Deutsch, head of the department of economics and political science at the University of B.C., predicted Friday night an increased interest in arts, culture and entertainment during the next 20 to 25 years.

Dr. Deutsch, in a banquet address at the B.C. Association of Broadcasters' annual summer meeting here, referred to the Gordon Commission report which predicted an increase to 27,000,000 in Canada's population by 1980.

He said B.C.'s population would double to 3,000,000. Vancouver would have 1,500,000 and Victoria 250,000.

The biggest increase will be in urban areas, he said, and because of increased automation, there would be a boost in earning power and leisure time.

He predicted shorter working hours and longer holidays as automation progresses.

'ORPHAN' UNWANTED AT SCHOOL

CAMPBELL RIVER (CP)—A young school visitor was twice turned away on the schools steps here.

Fishing Couple Nets $50,000

CAMPBELL RIVER — Bob Robertson, Quadra Island, skipper of the seiner Otard, and his wife made $50,000 between them during a three-month seining season.

Mr. Robertson, still in his 30s, is known as a "highline" fisherman whose boat is consistently among those with the top catches each year.

He received $18,000 as a crew member, a skipper's bonus, and an extra allowance as owner of the seine net. His wife, cook on the vessel for the season, received $18,000, as did the other five crew members.

One of the crew took his money, flew to Vancouver, bought a Cadillac, drove it for a few hours, stored it, flew back to Campbell River, and was on the Otard again 16 hours after having left.

The vessel is owned by the Canadian Fish Company of Vancouver.

TWO MORE AREAS OPENED —AND JUST IN TIME!

Hunting restrictions were lifted late Friday in game management area No. 7, east of Keremeos, because of rainfall.

Recreation Minister Westwood announced that the South Okanagan electoral district in game management area No 8 has also been declared open, clearing the entire South Okanagan-Grand Forks-Greenwood area for hunters.

The newly-opened area includes Osoyoos, Oliver, Penticton and as far north as Summerland.

ANOTHER SLANT

By OSCAR FRALEY

NEW YORK (UPI)—Memo to fellow sportswriters:

Seems we're about to get what we deserve. And hold on now, before you go jumping out the press box window, this is good.

Television is going to show just what fine, courageous types we really are.

All of this will start coming about Oct. 8 when NBC begins a new series about a gent named "Bat" Masterson. He was, as you may recall, a sports columnist for the New York Morning Telegraph a few years back after having trained as a buffalo hunter, Indian scout and sheriff.

★ ★ ★

But the advance publicity, at least, plays heavily on the fact that he was a sports writer for 18 years. And I've got to allow that they're pretty honest about us fellows because they label sportswriter Bat as—and I quote—"A dapper charmer, swift thinker and man of intelligence, strength, courage and action."

Fits all of us, naturally.

It's a program which figures to prove that times don't change. Because research discloses that Bat was a man who waxed wroth and irate (got mad) when there were fistic "upsets" which didn't seem to be sweetly aromatic.

Once, after a Madison Square Garden bout between Sam Langford and Joe Jeannette (who fought more often than Eddie and Debbie) he wrote:

"If Joe and Sam were trying Friday night—and thinking it over, I've concluded they were—both are as fine a pair of prize ring bums as I ever saw. But understand, I'm only one of a very few men who believe they were trying. Ninety per cent of the crowd was convinced it was a frameup."

Well, Maybe Times Don't Change

If that has a slightly familiar ring, it just goes to prove that boxing hasn't changed a bit. You probably wrote the identical words the last time you covered a fight.

The only thing that puzzles me is why they had to dig back so far to find someone to bear our gonfalon, as we are wont to say.

Maybe these teevee guys never heard of John Mooney, out in Salt Lake City. One night he staged a charity rassling show and, when one of the headliners didn't show, John clumb through the ropes hisself. Not only that, he won the bout. No gun, neither.

★ ★ ★

Then we got guys like Red Grange, Tom Harmon, Boston College Til Ferdenzi, W. & M.'s Al Helfer and Kentucky Russ Hodges from the gridiron; Princeton's Bud Palmer and Wyoming's Curt Gowdy from basketball; Olympic track man Marty Glickman and such baseballers as Dizzy Dean, Leo Durocher, Frankie Frisch, Waite Hoyt, Joe Garagiola and Rex Barney now in the press box.

So they won't have to strain for material if they run a bit short with whatever "Bat" did.

The one I'd like to see 'em shoot is the blizzardy night at Bear Mountain when Jud Bailey and Old Fearless headed for the top of the ski slide with a toboggan.

Nice to be able to report they stopped us. But it looks like at last we've got it made, fellers.

POSITION ISN'T EVERYTHING

Awkward is position Earl Torgeson (17) found himself in as umpire Frank Umont called him safe after Chicago White Sox infielder stole second base in game against Boston. Torgeson remained in somewhat uncomfortable position while shortstop Don Budden of Red Sox protested decision. Both umpire and runner held firm on their positions as White Sox won 4-1.

Ramblers' Fast Start Helps Exhibition Win

By GRAHAM COX

Seattle Ramblers had to make all their gains in the first half of Friday night's exhibition Canadian football game against Oak Bay Drakes because the second half, but for about 30 seconds belonged to Victoria.

Drakes surprised a crowd of 950 with their rugged defence and the power running of youthful veteran Wayne Henderson, filling in at fullback for the absent Ken Higgs.

Drakes' alternate quarterback, Henderson has been working out at the fullback slot. Friday was his first opportunity to prove his worth.

LONG ROMP

A masterful 100-yard runback from the opening kickoff by Rambler halfback Royal Dotson was the only scoring play in the second half.

Ramblers picked up a total of 115 yards in penalties through the game, 60 of them coming in the second half. Drakes were assessed 20, all in the first.

The first half of the game went pretty well the way Ramblers wanted, particularly their opening drive . . . 62 yards to a touchdown in nine plays.

PASS HELPS

The climax of the drive came when halfback Len Hawkins passed from the 25 to the five-yard line and fullback Harjow Stevens boomed over tackle for the score. Stevens then split the uprights for a 7-0 lead.

Drakes came back with a field goal by Pete Turko to make the score 7-3 minutes later, but early in the second quarter Bill Johnson carried over from the two and then fumbled the ball. Rambler end Sam Buckley recovered and the score rose to 13-3. Stevens' good kick was ruled out by a Seattle offside.

Drakes nearly doubled the Seattle production in the passing game, with 93 yards on six completions out of 21 tries while Ramblers could only make good on four of 14 for 49 yards.

Before the end of the half, quarterback Bob Lydum scored on a keeper play and Stevens again made good the conversion for a 20-3 edge.

CAME BACK

Desperation heightening their sharpness, Drakes rolled right back, with the minute flag flying, to bring the count to 20-10 when Cliff Moore hit through centre from the one.

Playing their first contest of the season, the U.S. squad showed the fans a powerful line and fine quarter-backing to roll up a total 223 yards along the ground against Oak Bay's total of 179.

Next regular league game will be played Monday night at Royal Athletic Park when Mayo Vampires tangle with Navy, starting at 8 p.m.

MEN IN BLUE SEEKING BETTER PENSION DEAL

ST. LOUIS (AP)—Lee Ballanfant, for 22 years an umpire with the National League, says the men in blue feel they should be cut in on the players' pension fund.

"We work without charge in the all-star game, one of the sources of the players' money and would be glad to contribute to the fund as they do," Ballanfant said.

Now 63, Ballanfant quit umpiring last year. The maximum umpire's pension is $2,400 a year—Ballanfant receives about $2,000—and he is working as a Chicago Cubs scout to make ends meet.

Favored Alcide Easy Winner in St. Leger

DONCASTER, England (AP)—Alcide romped to victory in the 182-year-old St. Leger today, the last classic of the English flat racing season.

Alcide was a 4-to-9 betting favorite, the hottest favorite since Bahram won the race in 1935 at odds of 4 to 11.

None Nicer, 10 to 1, was second and Nagami, 100 to 8, third.

Alcide covered the one mile, six furlongs and 132 yards over a turf course in 3.06.4.

The three-year-old bay colt by Alycidon out of Chenile shot to the front two furlongs from home and won by eight lengths.

Three-quarters of a length separated None Nicer and Nagami.

Race for Top Featured

By The Canadian Press

Either Calgary Stampeders or Winnipeg Blue Bombers should take over first place in the Western Football Conference in weekend games.

Both teams, now tied for the top with four wins, play tonight and Monday. But the game tonight has the Bombers at Calgary and the winner of that contest should continue in first place as both are favorites to win their Monday games.

Monday night Winnipeg meets British Columbia Lions at Vancouver and Calgary invades Regina to take on Saskatchewan Roughriders.

British Columbia, in the cellar of the five-team circuit with six straight losses, also plays twice this weekend. The Lions meet the resurgent Eskimos at Edmonton tonight.

Saskatchewan and Edmonton, with three wins apiece, are tied two points behind Calgary and Winnipeg.

Winnipeg Blue Bombers will be a question mark with their backfield shuffled as a result of the broken leg suffered last weekend by fullback Gerry James, the league's leading scorer for the last two seasons.

John Varone will switch from halfback to take James' place alongside Charlie Shepard. Bob McNamara, who had been ailing, will return to team up with Leo Lewis on the half line.

TRIPUCKA RETURNS

George Terlep's Saskatchewan Roughriders probably will be spurred by the return of Frank Tripucka, a great forward-passing quarterback. Tripucka suffered a shoulder separation Aug. 18 and since then Riders' main attack has been in the power running of fullback Cookie Gilchrist.

The Lions and their new coach, Dan Edwards, will be cheered by the return of fullback By Bailey, the team's highest scorer. Bailey has been sidelined with a torn rib cartilage. Ed Vereb will move from temporary occupancy of Bailey's position to left half.

Tackle and defensive end Ed Enos, injured in late August and then held in reserve, also will be in the lineup.

Plenty of Theories But Still No Tuna

WEDGEPORT, N.S. (CP)—In a three-day span in September of 1949 five international tuna teams fishing here caught 72 big bluefin tuna weighing a total of nearly 14 tons. And in the preceding three months that year a fantastic total of 1,760 bluefin were landed weighing in all some 225 tons.

The four teams in this year's 15th international tuna cup match went into the home stretch today without even a strike reported. The last chance was to begin at 7 a.m. with 11 hours of angling to go.

As the final day dawned there was a do-or-die determination among the teams from Mexico, Cuba, the United States and the Commonwealth. No Wedgeport tournament has been "skunked" but the record was no solace to match officials who showed outright concern.

Fishermen, guides, boat captains and ichthyologists have proferred a host of excuses as to why the big steely bluefin has decided to snub the delicacies offered in such favorite autumn playgrounds as Soldiers Rip here.

The theories have been varied. It was too rough, too calm, too bright, too dull, too cold, too warm or they were choosey about the bait.

Another suggested this week by salt water fishing authority Henry Lyman of Boston was that ocean salinity, or saltness, may be unusually low. Heavy rains all summer long on the eastern seaboard had washed considerable fresh water to the sea, lowering the salinity on the immediate coastal fringe. Tuna forage only in water with high salt content.

The tournament is scheduled to end at 6 p.m. tonight. Mexico defends the championship Sharp Trophy but officials haven't figured out exactly what to do if nobody hauls in a fish today. Either Mexico will be allowed to retain the trophy or it will be kept by the Nova Scotia government or donor Alton B. Sharp on a "no championship" basis.

U.S. ACE UPSET

Bedard Provides Tennis Shocker

TORONTO (CP)—Bob Bedard, top-ranked Canadian tennis player, rode into today's singles semifinals of the international invitation tennis tournament on one of the most stunning upsets in week-long play.

Bedard, from Sherbrooke, Que., Friday crashed his way over the clay courts at the Toronto Lawn Tennis Club past veteran Dick Savitt of Orange, N.J., winning his quarter-final singles match 6-1, 6-2.

Savitt, former Wimbledon, Australian and Canadian champion, played with an aching racquet wrist but insisted it made little difference to his game.

Today, with the last of the Americans eliminated from men's singles competition, Bedard goes against Luis Ayala of Chile, conceded tops in South America. Billy Knight of England is paired against mighty Mal Anderson of Australia.

Anderson, top-seeded in a glittering international field, had to battle his way into the semi-finals, with a 6-2, 3-6, 7-5 victory over Budge Patty of Los Angeles, which could have gone either way.

One final is scheduled for today—the fight for the women's doubles crown with Australia's Thelma Long and Mary Hawton paired against Maria Bueno of Brazil and Marta Hernandez of Mexico.

In the men's doubles semi-finals today, Ayala and Ulf Schmidt of Sweden go against Mario Llamas and Pancho Contreras, the 1-2 men of Mexico. Anderson and Savitt team up against Denmark's Kurt Neilsen and Bob Howe of Australia.

Neilsen and Howe advanced through the second round Friday by defeating Torontonians Hugh Peacock and Lloyd Percival, 6-1, 6-1, then downed Knight and Michael Davies of Wales, 6-1, 6-3.

Bert on Way To Puck Camp

VANCOUVER (CP)—National Hockey League star Bert Olmstead left here Friday night to fly to his club's training camp opening Monday at Peterborough, Ont.

Olmstead, formerly with Montreal Canadiens and now with Toronto Maple Leafs, Friday had a six-month jail term for assault reduced to a $1,000 fine by the British Columbia Court of Appeal.

The 31-year-old player had previously been sentenced to the jail term for assault on West Vancouver mining executive Ralph Rooney, which police court Magistrate N. J. Bartman had called "unprovoked and vicious."

No Doubt About It, 'Bellies Had Class

When Jake Proctor began assembling his 1958 edition of the New Westminster Salmonbellies for the Intercity Lacrosse League wars, the experts all climbed on one limb and picked that team as the one to beat.

Well, nobody beat them with any amount of regularity and the Salmonbellies are the new inter-city champions.

They did it by defeating Nanaimo Timbermen 11-5 Friday night.

New Westminster won the best-of-seven final 4-3. The final was the only one in western Canada. And now meet Welland-Crowland Switsons of Ontario in the national final next week. The eastern squad is expected in New Westminster tonight.

LARGEST CROWD

A crowd of 4,573, the largest ever to watch a lacrosse game in New Westminster, was on hand for the thrilling game.

The east-west Mann Cup series will be played here, with the first game starting either Monday or Tuesday.

Backed by the goaltending of Stan Joseph, the Salmonbellies outscored Nanaimo in every period. They led 2-1 at the end of the first period, 5-3 at half time and 8-3 after three periods of play.

Jack Bionda, who led the league in scoring during the season, again was the top man, with four goals, making his total 19 for the seven-game final series. Walt Harris and Mario Crema each scored twice for New Westminster.

THREE FOR DON

Don Ashbee got three of the five Nanaimo goals, two of which were scored in the last two minutes of play. Joseph, who played magnificently in the New Westminster goal despite a badly cut hand, stopped 25 shots. Fred Fulla stopped 24 at the other end.

The game was hard fought throughout, with two major stoppages for fights. Rudy Reisinger of New Westminster and Ross Roskamp of Nanaimo each got a 10-minute fighting penalty at the conclusion of the third period and Lisle Scott of Nanaimo got a five-minute penalty in the last period after he cut up Doug McRory with a check.

McRory had to leave the game to receive six stitches but later returned for the final period.

A total of 47 minutes in penalties was called by referees Sid Greenwood and Earl McDonald, 27 minutes to Nanaimo.

In the series, the Timbermen won all three games played in Nanaimo and New Westminster took all four on home grounds. The final game was awarded to New Westminster's grounds because the Salmonbellies finished first in the league.

U.S. GOLF

Coe Faces Aaron In Amateur Final

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Lanky Charlie Coe, the ex-champ who has been beating unknowns, today meets little known Tommy Aaron, who's whipped some big names, for the United States national amateur golf championship.

Coe, a 34-year-old oil broker from Oklahoma City, won the title in 1949 and never has come this close again, although playing in each subsequent tournament.

Aaron, 21, a former All-Georgia quarterback at Gainesville High, who now attends the University of Florida, is playing his first U.S. amateur, although he has won the southeastern conference crown twice.

In Friday's semifinals, Coe downed Cincinnati salesman Roger McManus, 3 and 2, while Aaron overwhelmed UCLA's Dick Foote, 10 and 9.

Each finalist has won seven matches over the 6,680-yard Olympic Country Club lake course.

The last of the Canadian contingent, Eric Hanson of Toronto, was defeated in Thursday's fifth round by Dr. Frank Taylor of Pomona, Calif., 2 up.

Decision Reserved

NEW YORK (AP)—Supreme Court Justice Jacob Markowitz reserved decision Friday on a motion by James D. Norris, former president of the International Boxing Club, to quash, on grounds of ill health, a subpoena ordering his appearance before a grand jury investigating corruption in boxing.

Norris' attorney, Raphael P. Koenig, said Norris had suffered two serious heart attacks.

ORIOLE MANAGER THINKING

BUT IT DIDN'T WORK

Well, It Was Worth Trying...

KANSAS CITY (AP)—Baseball fans couldn't believe their ears Thursday when the announcer droned out Baltimore Orioles starting lineup:

As every fan knows Jack Harshman is a left-handed pitcher who isn't destined to take the centre-field job from the Orioles' fleet Jim Busby. And Milt Pappas is a big, 18-year-old pitcher who may become great, but not as a second baseman.

It was astute Baltimore manager Paul Richards' latest scheme to get all the mileage he can from the defensively strong but weak-hitting Orioles.

Said Richards:

"When we are on the road we might get off to a big first inning if I can get my better hitters into the lineup without having to take out my regulars. If Harshman and Pappas come up, I can put in pinch hitters for them. Then when we take the field I can put in Busby and Gardner."

Busby and Gardner are far from the best hitters on the club. The night before Richards had put a pinch-hitter in for Busby when he came to bat with the bases filled in the first inning. That, of course, prevented Busby from playing at all, even though he was listed as the starting centre-fielder. That started the fertile Richards' mind working overnight.

It would be nice to report the scheme netted some runs and both Busby and Gardner made miraculous catches to protect the lead. But it didn't work out that way.

Woodling, in turn, was replaced by Busby. And Pappas, down in seventh spot, was replaced by Gardner.

The Athletics won 7-1.

That Series Opener May Be Quite a Duel

By United Press International

Lew Burdette and Bob Turley, the probable starters for the opening game of the World Series, have convinced their managers they're both ready to go right now.

There was really "nothing" to choose between them Friday night.

Burdette pitched a three-hit 6-0 shutout over the Cardinals to reduce the Braves' pennant-clinching "magic number" to six, while Turley hurled a four-hit 5-0 shutout against the White Sox to shave the Yankees' combination to three.

Hank Aaron made Burdette's 17th victory a breeze when he drove in four of Milwaukee's runs with his 29th homer and a triple. Aaron also had a double to boost his batting average to .336, only three points below the leading .339 figure of Philadelphia's Richie Ashburn.

The victory for Turley was his 21st of the year and he thus became the first Yankee pitcher to reach that total since 1951 when Ed Lopat and Vic Raschi both equalled it. The Yankees clinched the game with a three-run burst off Ray Moore in the fourth inning.

Cleveland edged Boston, 5-4; Detroit beat Baltimore, 3-1, and Kansas City whipped Washington, 4-3, in other American League games.

In the National League, San Francisco took a pair from Philadelphia, 5-2 and 19-2; Chicago defeated Cincinnati, 7-5, and Los Angeles licked Pittsburgh, 7-3.

Rocky Colavito furnished the Indians with their winning margin over the Red Sox when he clouted his 35th homer with the bases full in the seventh inning.

STILL DEADLOCKED

Pete Runnels and Ted Williams each collected one hit in three tries to continue in a virtual tie for the AL batting crown.

Al Kaline socked his 15th home run with one on in the eighth inning off Hoyt Wilhelm to snap a 1-1 tie between the Tigers and Orioles.

Bob Cerv slammed his 34th homer and Hector Lopez contributed his 16th as the Athletics moved up into sixth place. Roy Sievers hit his 37th for the Senators.

The Giants set a NL record for runs scored in a single game this season when they put together 17 hits for 19 runs in the nightcap of their twin bill with the Phillies. The Giants also held the previous mark of 16 runs scored against the Dodgers on May 13.

CLUB MARK TIED

The Cubs tied a 28-year-old club record of 171 homers in a single season when Dale Long and Walt Moryn each connected against the Redlegs. Bill Henry, last of three Chicago pitchers, held Cincinnati to one hit over the last four innings and gained credit for his fifth win.

Roger Craig of the Dodgers, recalled from the minors earlier in the week, won his first game in the majors since Sept. 7, 1957, when he stopped the Pirates on seven hits. Duke Snider drove in four runs with his 14th homer, two singles and a double, while Dodger rookie Ron Fairly hit his first major league homer.

Nothing Better Than Early Start

It would seem that the newly-formed Dizzy Dean Baseball League not only will be the first of its kind ever formed in North America, but it will also be the first registered for a season still seven months away.

That was the plan forwarded by the league president Gerry Girard Friday.

Young players between the ages of 15 and 17 are asked to send their name, address, age, phone number, position and the league in which they played last year to league headquarters, 2616 Doncaster Drive.

Application forms will appear on the Times' sports pages next week.

Backing Girard on the league executive are vice-president Jack Start; secretary-treasurer Howard Grant; publicity director Max Bloomfield; players agent Art Donnelly and chief umpire Bill Munday. Directors are Bill Pomeroy, Frank Martin and Al March.

The position of honorary president has been accorded Dizzy Dean, former St. Louis Cardinal great who will be on hand to officially open the league next summer.

Girard said Friday that the group had hopes of eventually seeing their six or eight teams develop into an international system with an annual "world series" played in Victoria.

DENVER, Colo., (AP) — Two young Californians battled for the lead as the $20,000 Denver Open centennial golf tournament reached the halfway stage Friday.

Tommy Jacobs of Whittier, who paced the first 18 holes, retained the lead with a 65-67—132, eight strokes under par at the 6,642-yard Wellshire municipal course. Two strokes behind was John McMullen of Fair Oaks with 66-68—134.

Junior Circuit Opens Sunday

The defending city champions help launch the three-team city league by meeting Navy in the schedule-opener at Royal Roads. Game time is 2.30.

Running out of a double fullback formation, the Walt Pumphrey-coached Vampires will be going with holdover quarterback Ross Fitzgerald calling the shots. He will be backed up by alternate signal-caller Jim Moody.

HEALTHY LINE

With a line averaging over the 200-pound mark and a fleet set of backs who weigh in better than 180 pounds, Pumphrey is strengthened with the addition of fullback Gordie Millin and end Bernie Johnston from last year's Oak Bay Drake Juniors.

The team is also bolstered by Bob Powell, a tackle from Vancouver, and four players from Duncan.

Vampires made it into the B.C. final last season before being sidetracked by Meralomas in Vancouver. The provincial championship is scheduled to be held in Victoria this season.

Philadelphia Youngster Impressive

PHILADELPHIA (AP)—Unbeaten Len Matthews, 19-year-old Philadelphia knockout artist, proved Friday night he could box as well as punch as he outpointed tough little Tommy Tibbs of Boston in a 10-round nationally televised bout.

Matthews, who won 12 of his previous 13 fights by knockouts, earned the unanimous vote of the two judges and referee after a rugged give-and-take battle with the durable Boston newsboy.

Under the fixe-point-must Pennsylvania scoring system, referee Pete Tomasco scored Matthews the winner, 49-42, while judges Bill Hall and Jimmy Weston awarded the Philadelphian the verdict, 50-37 and 49-43 respectively.

BEARDSLEY, Minn. (AP)—The thing to do when recovering a fumble, coach Dick Elrite patiently told his high school footballers, is to relax and you won't get hurt.

Trout Anglers Can Smile Now

Mid-Island trout fishermen have a great future in store.

Regional fisheries biologist Dave Hurn gave 28,000 reasons for this when he told the Nanaimo Fish and Game Club this week that that number of Rainbow trout fingerlings had been stocked in Westwood and Shawnigan Lakes last Friday from provincial hatcheries.

Westwood got 9,000 of these. Blind Lake is to get thousands of trout in the near future.

Hurn said restocking was a move to replace native cutthroat and earlier-planted Kamloops in "more heavily fished" lakes. He said the surface-feeding rainbow should give summer fishermen better sport, as well as supply fresh blood to depleted stocks.

Other lakes, Boomerang and Chain, will also receive rainbows after they have been chemically rehabilitated.

About seven years ago Kamloops trout were planted in a number of Island lakes. Many of these have become worm-infested.

Fresh stocking with healthy fish should help remedy this situation, the biologist said.

'IF THEY WANT'

Skipper Will Sail Against Sceptre

NEWPORT, R.I. (AP)—Corny Shields, 63-year-old "retired" skipper of Columbia, said today he'll sail the yacht in her America's Cup defence "if they want me."

By "they," he was referring to Henry Sears and the other members of the syndicate that built the white-hulled 12-metre yacht.

But Thursday night, after Columbia was selected, Sears said he couldn't do without Corny—"he'll definitely sail the boat in the cup match."

Although no one in the Columbia camp would confirm or deny it, the feeling now is that Briggs Cunningham will be at the wheel most of the time in the match with England's Sceptre—with Shields available for spot sailing.

Corny, one of the all-time greats in Long Island Sound sailing, is particularly adept at getting a boat over the starting line in a favorable position. And in match racing a good start is essential.

The best-of-seven match with Sceptre opens next Saturday. There will be no racing on Sunday. The starting line is 10 miles offshore in the Atlantic Ocean.

This will be the 17th defence of the hallowed cup since the schooner America beat a fleet of British yachts in a race around the Isle of Wight in 1851. The U.S. has never lost.

Stubborn Mount Makes Fatal Error

CLEVELAND (AP) — Jockey Ralph Eccard was severely injured Friday in the first race at Cranwood race track when his mount, Cook's County, refused the first turn, went through the wooden rail and tumbled down an incline, landing on top of Eccard.

RELIEF AT GATES?

Floodlight Fixture Proves Successful

LONDON (CP) — Accrington Stanley turned to floodlights and evening crowds Friday night in an effort to bolster its gate, and the experiment apparently was a thumping success.

The third division club switched its game with Brentford, scheduled for today, to Friday night because of a first division game to be played today at Blackburn, four miles from Accrington's home field.

The game produced a 1-1 tie, but more important it drew almost 10,000 fans. The turnout was 3,200 more than attended last Saturday's home game, and was almost 3,000 above the average attendance at Accrington games last season.

SEE IT SPREADING

The football league, which sanctioned the match as an experiment, is expected to receive a number of applications from clubs in soccer crowded areas for permission to hold Friday night games as a means of preventing Saturday fixture clashes.

Friday the league gave permission to Wolverhampton Wanderers, the league champions, to play a Saturday evening match against Manchester United Oct. 4.

Although evening soccer matches are played regularly in the early part of the season, Friday night has always been left free because of Saturday afternoon's full complement of games.

"The decision does not in any way establish a precedent," said league secretary Alan Hardacre, "but we are always ready to test any innovation which might be in the interest of the clubs."

Check House, Winterize Now That Autumn's Here

Make a checklist of fall repairs just as soon as you can. Determine what jobs can be handled indoors some cool evening or rainy Sunday afternoon. Plan to do the outdoor work immediately.

Start checking at the top of the house. If shingles on your roof flap in the breeze, imagine what they'll do in a driving storm. Renailing will put them to rights. Asphalt roofing cement will take care of small cracks in shingles and in flashing.

Gutters should be free of leaves and other debris, hangers should be secure.

IT'S A GOOD IDEA—as a safety precaution — to work with someone when you check the roof and other high parts of your house. Maybe you can arrange with a neighbor to help him with his high work if he helps you.

Check last year's calking. (This should be done before you do any painting.) Calk around door and window frames, other joints where moisture might collect. Dig out worn, brittle calking and replace.

If you don't own a calking gun, purchase of one might be a good investment. Be sure to clean it thoroughly when you're finished using it. Otherwise, the hardened compound will make it useless.

Don't paint just because it's the right season for it. A good paint job will last several years. Check for exposed worn spots on wooden siding, for exposed nail heads that may be rusting. Sand and paint around those spots.

If you have a brick house, or a brick foundation, check the mortar between the bricks. Renew it wherever it breaks and crumbles with a little probing.

Fill gaps between foundation and sidewalk where they come together with tar or asphalt compound.

REPAIR CRACKS in concrete walks and drives. Letting them go will only make them worse as alternate freezing and thawing enlarges them. Use one of the new chemical bonding agents—either the type you paint on the crack or the kind that's mixed with the patching compound—to save you the job of chipping out the old material.

When you remove the screens, mark damaged areas and fix screens some time when the weather keeps you indoors. Wash them thoroughly before putting them away for the winter.

GATHER GARDEN TOOLS and clean them. After you've removed the mud, go to work on the rust with a steel brush and steel wool. File the edges of spades and hoes so they'll be sharp and ready to use next spring. Sand wood handles.

Drain the garden hose and coil it neatly. Don't leave any kinks in it.

Get out the snow shovel. Clean it if it needs it, file the edge so that it's good and sharp. Hang it where you can get to it easily.

OUTSIDE JOB

PORTLAND, Maine (UPI)—"Start your gasoline-powered lawn mower when you are out on the lawn," is the advice of Fire Chief Carl P. Johnson. Johnson said that two fires in Maine's largest city within three months were caused by explosions from power lawn motors which had been started up inside buildings.

BEASTALL ADVISES

Rake, Roll and Rake Again Rule for Laying Level Lawns

By JACK BEASTALL

Every effort should be made to complete the seeding of new lawns this weekend or next. Where the site has been made ready as outlined in previous articles, the final levelling will be the next step.

This is not a job to be rushed. It requires painstaking care to make the surface, whether flat or sloping, as level as humanly possible.

Jack

When the soil is loose, as from recent tilling, it must be compacted in some manner, especially this year when natural soil moisture is lacking.

In most seasons the early September rains tend to tighten the soil, and under such conditions the use of a roller, especially on clay, is not advisable.

This season being different, a roller will do the best job, and one should be borrowed or rented.

The beauty in using a roller is that it quickly shows up the soft spots, packing the soil and leaving a "rolling" surface of humps and hollows.

ONCE OVER LIGHTLY

One light rolling lengthwise and crosswise is sufficient to bring out the irregularities, after which the humps are raked down to fill the hollows.

Another pass with the roller will tell you how good you are at estimating the amount of hump needed to fill a hollow. most likely there will be more humps and hollows in different places, so it is back to the rake and try again.

This game of raking and rolling can be kept up all day Sunday, each pass bringing you nearer to a perfectly level surface and the kind of lawn you have pictured.

It is a tiresome game, but worth every minute devoted to it. Any hollows which are missed will fill with water during sprinkling or rainstorms, and the seed will be washed off the humps and into the hollows, giving a patchy lawn which is hard to rectify.

POINT OF DESPAIR

Another thing to remember is that the best cutting job on grass is attained when the surface is level. High spots are cut short and result in browned patches during summer, while low spots are left long and green.

When you reach the point of a truly-level surface, which is very close to the point of despair, the top half-inch or so of soil is loosened with the rake ready to receive the seed.

There is quite an art in loosening the surface without disturbing the level, and it all depends on the angle of the rake to the surface. The best way to find this angle is to practice on a piece of firm, vacant soil.

SOW SQUARES

Regardless of size, it is wise to mark off the lawn area in squares before starting to broadcast the seed. The size of the squares is immaterial; make them to suit yourself and the size and shape of the area.

Next, divide the seed into equal parts, one part for each square. Going to this trouble is a great help in getting even distribution and lessens the chances of patchy seeding.

Finally, a light raking to cover the seed, again without disturbing the level and taking care to keep the seed evenly distributed, and a light rolling to keep the surface soil and seed in place.

With careful watering, the lawn should have a green haze on the surface within seven to 12 days.

Jacks Build House In Two Weeks Time

By MR. FIX

Dream of a "second home" comes closer to realization for many families with development of a new home building technique by two South Carolina builders.

Brothers J. C. and L. D. Long are lowering costs by jacking up the roof of an all-concrete "vacation" house before the walls are built. Summer homes are under construction at Isle of Palms, island resort area, Charleston.

The result is a reduction in cost of about one-fifth in construction of the building, and move-in time is but two weeks after ground is broken for foundation slab of the dwelling.

The Long brothers' method is currently the subject of a patent application.

Welded wire fabric—similar to the wire mesh that's imbedded in driveway construction—make possible use of the lift-slab method of roof raising.

It gives necessary strength to the slab.

After a similarly reinforced ground slab has set, a plastic overlay is made and the roof is poured over a wire reinforcement.

Motor-driven jacks, five to each side of the slab, work in unison to raise the roof some nine feet above ground.

Centre posts are added for temporary support and walls, windows, doors and partitions are erected under the roof slab.

The plastic sheet is removed from underside of the roof slab, to be used as a vapor barrier in construction of another house.

The roof is then lowered in place and felted and tarred. A fuel stack and fuel line are provided, and house can be inhabited just as soon as plumbing and wiring are installed.

From here on, the handy man has a chance to get in his licks to further reduce cost of the finished dwelling.

He can do all the painting, laying of any of various floor coverings and construction of cabinets, closets and other niceties to finish the shell, which is inhabitable without those improvements.

What will build on this idea of first raising the roof remains to be seen, but possibilities include a second, vacation-time home for many families, and homes at relatively moderate cost for budget income groups.

Whether the technique will become widely used or whether it can be adapted to other, more elaborate types of private dwelling construction, are questions yet to be answered.

QUIZZING THE GARDENER

By JACK BEASTALL

Q. Can I sow sweet peas in the fall? If so, at what time? K.M.T., Shoal Bay.

A. Near the end of September is a good time to sow sweet peas. Prepare the trench for them now by digging deeply. If the drainage is poor, or the soil unusually heavy, lay broken brick or broken pots in the bottom of the trench. Fill the trench with good compost, but do not add any fertilizer. Given a normal winter, you should be able to pick good sweet peas by Mother's Day.

Q. When sweet green peppers turn bright red do they become hot? Mrs. M.A.S., Saseenos.

A. Sweet green peppers become sweeter and more nutricious when bright red. The hot peppers are different varieties listed as "hot" in the seed catalogs and on seed packets.

FIX-IT FORUM

A—Keep them in a lidded box in which you keep several sticks of carpenter's chalk. Take chalk out every couple months and dry in oven.

WEEK'S WORK

BY JACK BEASTALL

Shrubby border calceolarias may be propagated by cuttings taken now, and wintered in a cold frame.

Be prepared to bring in all house plants which have summered outside.

Commence four weeks of ripening for Christmas cactus (Zygocactus truncatus) by reducing watering to a little once a week.

VPL GIFT TO NEW GALLERY

Marking the opening of Greater Victoria's new Centennial gallery, Victoria Press Limited today presented to curator Colin Graham an original painting by Frederick A. Verner, ARCA (1836-1928), as an addition to the permanent collection of the local gallery. Entitled "The Fading Race," the painting was obtained from the collection of G. Max Bell of Calgary and is regarded as one of the classics of artworks of the Canadian plains.

CITY GALLERY'S NEW $75,000 WING OPENED

'In Front Rank of Art Centres'

By NORMAN CRIBBENS

With the opening of its $75,000 fireproof wing today, Victoria Art Gallery moved into the front rank of Canada's art centres.

It is now one of four class "A" galleries in western Canada and as such will be able to secure class "A" exhibits from the National Art Gallery in Ottawa.

"All our senior members are greatly interested in your progress and development."

Overaflow Crowd

Hundreds more gathered under the tall trees flanking the main drive and applauded heartily when Education Minister Leslie Peterson said:

"This splendid structure marks the culmination of many years of planning and persistent hard work by many people who have the cultural interests of Victoria at heart."

The new wing, located immediately in front of the main gallery, has two main exhibition rooms, a basement for preparation or storage of paintings and a glass-covered link to the entrance court at the main building.

It was dedicated by Archbishop Harold Sexton, who said:

"This is only the beginning of a greater and wider development in the cultural growth of our community. It means much to be, for I believe true art finds its best expression in the King of all beauty and glory."

Plaque Unveiled

Mayor Percy Scurrah unveiled a plaque commemorating the new building as a combined Centennial project built out of Centennial funds provided by the province with Victoria, Oak Bay, Saanich and Esquimalt.

"Today we have an art gallery worthy not only of the capital city of British Columbia but of the province as a whole."

The mayor then presented the Centennial silver medal to Miss Sara Spencer who dedicated her old family home at 1040 Moss Street for use by the art gallery. Miss Spencer was out of town when centennial medals were presented in Beacon Hill Park several weeks ago.

Foundations Laid

Commander Fred Fairfull, president of the gallery, paid tribute to past presidents "whose foresight and initiative have gone to produce the art centre we have today."

Ald. Geoffrey Edgelow, as chairman of the Greater Victoria Centennial Committee, emphasized that 150 Victoria school children are now receiving art instruction at the gallery every week.

"The opening of this new wing is therefore a very important milestone in the cultural growth of our city and the development of artistic consciousness among our younger citizens."

The ceremonies over, hundreds of men, women and children inspected the specially-prepared survey of Canadian paintings of the past 200 years, including the works of Emily Carr and the Group of Seven.

These include "Blackfeet Chief and Subordinates," a warm color study in the old pictorial style of Paul Kane (1810-1883) in which the features and expressions of the Indians are vividly depicted.

"The Car Ferry at Sidney, B.C.," by Edwin J. Hughes, is a sharp, realistic study, and there is a beautiful winter landscape painted at Laval by Cornelius Krieghoff (1815-1872).

The most revolutionary painting on display is "Tocsin," an example of abstract expressionism by the young Canadian painter Jean Paul Riopelle, who is now working in Paris. He has been hailed equally in Paris, London and New York as one of the most promising painters of the post-war era.

"He is probably the first Canadian artist to have attained a fully international reputation," said Colin Graham, curator of Victoria Art Gallery.

Main Runway Extension Now Assured

Defence Minister George Pearkes said today the way now has been cleared for long-sought runway extension at Patricia Bay Airport.

He said agreement between provincial and federal governments on rerouting of Patricia Bay Highway, announced Friday by Highways Minister P. A. Gaglardi, should remove the last obstacle to the project.

Moving of the road is vital to the eastward extension of the east-west runway from 5,000 to 7,500 feet, or well across the present highway right of way.

OTTAWA TO BUILD

The provincial highways department will lay out the road route, and the federal government will do the building at federal expense.

"I think that is the last of the stumbling blocks," Maj.-Gen. Pearkes said by telephone in Vancouver, where he is attending the provincial Conservative leadership convention.

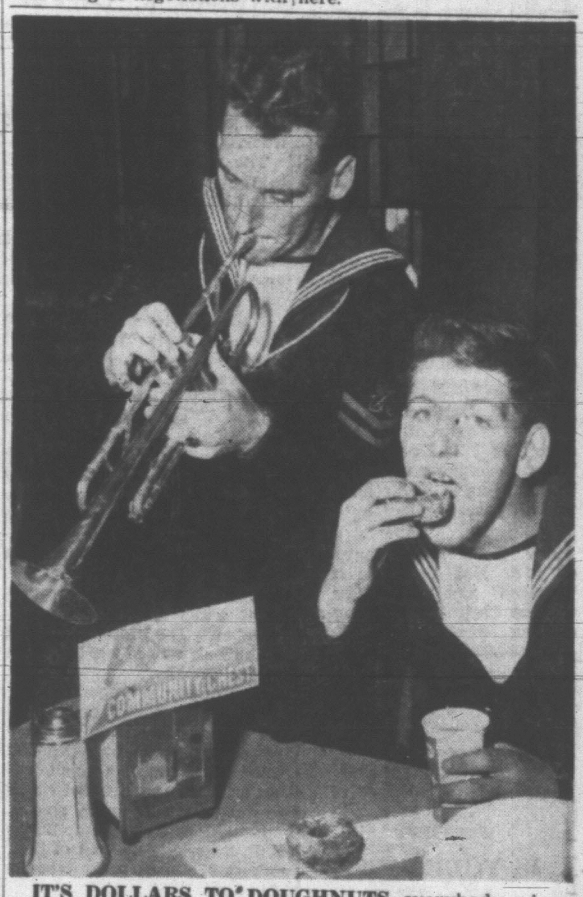

"I don't know if work will start this fall, but certainly the concluding of negotiations with B.C. will bring a start that much nearer, he said. "Actually there has been work going on all summer. Surveys have been made, and work is to begin shortly on strengthening and repairing existing runways."

PRIORITY

"It is the government's intention to do the job as soon as funds are available. It is one of the priority airfield improvement jobs in Canada."

Mayor Percy Scurrah said he knew of nothing standing in the way of an early start on the extension program.

"It's a beautiful airport, but planes are getting bigger, and the airport must grow with the times. With longer runways Britannias and Constellations will be able to land here, and I understand trans-continental flights might originate from here."

IT'S DOLLARS TO DOUGHNUTS everybody wins when the Navy throws a cruller party. HMCS Naden drive to raise Community Chest funds was launched Friday, when cooks prepared nearly 3,000 doughnuts, served with coffee to all hands who could display Red Feather showing they'd contributed to the Chest. Serenades were provided by bandsmen of HMCS Ontario, including PO John Collins, who gives with sweet music while OS H. R. Kok munches merrily. (RCN Photo.)

MONTE ROBERTS

People keep coming up to me and asking me, what is the matter with you, why are you walking around half-asleep?

And I keep telling these people, go away, I am enjoying an attack of spring fever.

But the people will not go away, they say, you cannot have spring fever, this is not spring, this is September, this is autumn.

What is so wrong about having spring fever at this time of year?

Why should spring fever be confined to April and May?

I discussed this with Mr. William Mackie, our wonderful weatherman, just yesterday, and Mr. Mackie—bless him—said that, in a meteorological manner of speaking, there is no reason spring fever cannot occur on Sept. 13 as easily as on May 13.

"Cloudy with occasional sunny periods," said Mr. Mackie, "sunny periods with occasional clouds. Temperatures in the high sixties. Light winds.

"It could happen in May, it could happen in September.

"I am all in favor," said Mr. Mackie, yawning graciously, "of spring fever on a year-round basis, which is possible, of course, only in this, the fairest city of them all."

Additional support for my premise that spring fever can be a 12-month proposition comes from the persistent piscatorialist, Mr. Lee Hallberg, who, if he can't catch 'em, can certainly talk about 'em.

Mr. Halberg suggests we should take a lesson from the salmon

The spring salmon, of course.

The spring salmon is a spring salmon in June, January, and any other month you care to mention.

"If a salmon can have spring all the time, why can't we?" asked Mr. Hallberg, before collapsing into a nearby hammock.

So don't bother asking me why I'm half-asleep.

NO LIFEJACKET IN CRUISER; FINE IMPOSED

Walter Lapwood, 1461 May, was fined $5 and $3.50 costs in Sidney RCMP court Friday for failing to provide lifejackets in a pleasure boat.

Police said Lapwood was picked up in a check of small boats in the RCMP's educational and enforcement campaign for water safety.

They said Lapwood's 14-foot boat contained one other adult and two children and had no life-preserving equipment as required by federal legislation.

Power Board Workers Sign No-Strike Pact

The B.C. Power Commission and its employees have signed an agreement which provides that there shall be no stoppage of work either by strike or lockout for the next two years.

Difficulties will be solved by a five-step procedure or, failing that, by arbitration binding on both sides.

The agreement covering salaries and working conditions became effective Sept. 1, affecting 500 non-professional office, field and survey employees.

It provides for compulsory payment of dues under the "Rand Formula," which requires all employees to pay the equivalent of dues to the employees' association, whether or not they choose to become members.

2 Seamen Guilty

Two young naval seamen pleaded guilty in city police court to two charges of theft under $50 value of auto accessories from the city's market parking lot early today.

Allan Ho, 19, and Douglas Tufford, 21, were remanded to Wednesday for probation report and sentence.

Annual general meeting and election of officers will be held by the Gyro Club of Victoria Monday, 6.30 p.m., at the Strathcona Hotel.

'DOOR OPEN'—MARTIN

Chinese Hospital Request Welcome

Health Minister Eric Martin said today the government's "door is wide open" for an application by the Chinese Hospital for funds to help build a $35,000, 16-bed wing addition.

But he warned that the hospital was classed as private, not acute, and therefore not automatically eligible for a grant.

"But if they will come and see me," he added, "we will review their request. The door is wide open. We don't usually extend grants to private hospitals, unless they change their status."

ACTION CALLED FOR

Immediate addition of the wing was recommended at an emergency meeting of the Chinese Hospital board Thursday, called as a direct result of the death Wednesday from starvation and malnutrition of 71-year-old Chinese, Lum Doy.

Recommended was a new one-storey, cement block wing addition to the present crowded 24-bed building, a plan which brought applause from various Victoria groups today.

"The need is obviously there, and I am sure people will be sympathetic to any drive for funds," said Mayor Percy Scurrah. "There is no doubt something must be done about that hospital. The whole thing needs renovating.

Chairman of the all-Chinese board Rev. M. F. Leung said an immediate fund-raising campaign would be considered, along with a request for assistance from the B.C. government.

OWNED BY CITY

The hospital has been owned by the city for many years, but it is administered by the Chinese Benevolent Society, which has spent much money on it.

William Hooson, Victoria social welfare department administrator, said such an addition was "long overdue," although he noted that many of the ailing elderly Chinese in the Victoria area were loath to enter hospital "because they think it is the last ditch and that they will die there."

He said the hospital was actually a boarding and nursing home, as well.

Community Chest secretary Adrian Gilmore said the need for a larger hospital for Chinese persons had been "evident for some time."

"They want to be with their own people," he added. They want to eat their own food, and speak their own language. They are not comfortable in other hospitals."

Father, Son Jailed Two Months For Assault on Police Officer

A father-son team who pleaded guilty to assaulting a police officer in Victoria West early Thursday each were sentenced in city police court today to two months in jail.

Horace Taylor, 55, of 651 Alpha, and Douglas Taylor, 28, of 609 Alpha, were represented by James Proudfoot, who called four character witnesses on behalf of the accused before sentence was passed.

The witnesses, who had known the accused men for periods between 10 and 40 years, gave references ranging from "very good" to "excellent."

Mr. Proudfoot said H. and D. Taylor Trucking, operated by the accused, would suffer if jail sentences were given as the man and his son were alone in the business.

Also he pointed out, Douglas' wife is expecting a child.

The father, Mr. Proudfoot said, has one conviction for fighting 32 years ago, and Douglas has a clean record.

Magistrate H. C. Hall said the Court of Appeal "has pointed out that assaulting a policeman is a very serious offence and should be dealt with accordingly. It also directs that such a conviction should not be met with a fine."

The Taylors became abusive and jumped on Cons. James Ramsay as he checked a car parked in bushes off Wilson Street at 1.15 a.m. Thursday.

The older man was standing beside the car in the deserted neighborhood, and Douglas, with two women, was inside when the constable approached.

Suspended Term, Fine For Cattle Rustlers

Rowan Johnston and George West, both of Saanich, were given six months suspended sentence in Colwood RCMP court Friday for theft of a young bull from a Millstream Road farm in late August.

The men were fined $35 on a second charge of cruelty to an animal.

They had earlier pleaded guilty to the charges and appeared Friday for sentence after a probation report was made.

The bull, taken from Ivor Mabberley's farm after midnight, died when it was dragged "as a prank" by a steel cable attached to the rear of a truck.

Police said the animal apparently stumbled when the truck pulled too fast, break a foreleg, horn and the spine.

The court ordered that restitution be made to the owner.

TOPICS OF THE DAY

Attendance at child health clinics has been rising sharply, Victoria-Esquimalt union board of health reported today.

A quarterly statement said attendance during the first six months of this year showed an increase of 42 per cent over the 1957 average. Attendance was 3,805 in 1948, rising to a record 5,679 in 1957.

The board said a contributing factor to the increase is the Salk anti-polio vaccine program, now offered to infants as young as three months.

BUT WHOOPING COUGH UP

Measles Almost Wiped Out Here During April-June

Measles was all but wiped out in Victoria and Esquimalt during the April-June period this year, union board of health reported today.

There were only eight cases reported during the three months compared with 360 during the same period last year. Average incidence for the period over the past five years has been 261.

But whooping cough showed an increase with 34 cases reported. Last year there were none. Average for the three months is nine cases.

ASK The TIMES

Q. To settle an argument, can you inform me if maize (now commonly called corn) was ever found in the pyramids or any other ancient structure in Africa or Asia? E. H. L.

A. Maize is of American origin and was unknown in other parts of the world before discovery of America. Its modern history began in 1492 when two Spanish explorers reported on a grain they found in Cuba. Later, explorers to the New World found maize being grown by Indians in all parts of America where agriculture was practised, from Canada to Chile.

PUBLISHER'S NOTEBOOK

By STUART KEATE

R.I.P.—Camillien

There was a legend around Montreal that Camillien Houde could eat 12 dozen oysters at a sitting.

"It was a lie. I had lunch with him one day, in an obscure north-end restaurant, and he ate only six dozen—before the regular dejeuner began.

Keate

That was the day, I recall, that we were trying to find out The Great Man's true weight. He was very sensitive about it. A Time photographer had done a sleazy trick: got down underneath the platform where Houde was speaking, and shot up, towards the embonpoint.

* * *

The press was frequently obliged to write unpleasant things about Camillien, because he presided over a gaudy and vice-ridden city.

They did so sadly, because they had great affection for this genial brigand—a rogue in the Shakespearean sense of the word; pleasantly mischievous, waggish, warm-hearted.

I remember calling on him one time after a particularly rough attack on him, in our magazine. Although he did not drink or smoke (in his latter years), the lower-right drawer of his desk at City Hall was kept for cigars and a bottle, and he offered me a drink.

"I do not h'understan," he sighed. "You h'ask me da polite questions, every t'ing is sympathetique, we discours like frans, and ten—poof! your magazine, she give me Hell!"

Houde was delighted. "I will always cherish this souvenir," he said. "You 'ave spread my nose all over the world."

* * *

On the political platform he was irresistible—the personification of French-Canadian gaiety, wit, and party fire.

In one campaign his opponents charged that Houde was separated from his wife and that he had to pay her $25 a meeting to show up with him on the platform.

Who can forget Camillien's reply to that one before a packed house?

"I turn now," he cried, with a dramatic wave in the direction of his spouse, "to this charge that I, Camillien Houde, mus' pay my wife $25 to come here wiz me.

"Let me say only zis—nevair, in hees life, 'as Camillien Houde paid a woman for ANY-zing!"

* * *

The crowd, of course, roared—and re-elected him.

TORONTO (CP)—The Canadian section of the International Commission of Jurists Friday drafted a letter to Governor James Folsom of Alabama, asking him to repeal the death sentence of Negro Jimmy Wilson.

The letter was in response to the action Thursday of the Alabama Court of Appeal which refused to reopen Wilson's case. He has been convicted of robbing with violence a white woman of $1.95.

The resolution was presented by Chief Justice C. J. Ford of Alberta and Mr. Justice Andre Taschereau of the Quebec Court of the Queen's Bench.

The section said it was not questioning the validity of Alabama law but opposed the sentence on the grounds of natural justice.

Canadian Lutherans Organize

WINNIPEG (CP)—Canadian officials of the Lutheran Church's Missouri synod announced Friday they have withdrawn from their parent body in the United States to form the First Lutheran Church in Canada.

The announcement followed a meeting of delegates representing 73,000 members of the Missouri synod in Canada.

In a prepared statement, officials of the Lutheran Church in Canada said the new group temporarily will receive aid from the American body in the form of trained pastors, funds and materials used in religious education programs. The ultimate aim is for complete independence.

Entering fourth year at university are these three attractive young women, left to right, Carol Smith, June Thomson and Carole McClellan. All three are studying for Bachelor of Arts degrees at University of British Columbia. Miss Smith plans to make teaching her career and Miss Thomson and Miss McClellan will continue studies in social work.

Campus Is Calling . . .

Many of Victoria's young women are now preparing to join that great group of knowledge-hungry people marching toward the "hallowed halls of higher learning." With the opening of colleges and universities throughout the country during the next two weeks, some students will be registering for the first time . . . while others will be returning to do advance study towards degrees in their chosen professions.

Timetables, brochures and registration cards are a part of first days in Victoria College. Here Miss Patricia Sullivan, assistant registrar explains courses available to future teachers Eileen Boychuk, Barrie Hanslip and Joan Simms. Eileen and Joan are entering second year in education, and Barrie, her first.

A career in social welfare is planned by 20-year-old Maxine Herbert, who leaves Victoria next week to enter Queen's University. The fourth-year arts student attended Victoria College and the University of British Columbia and will be studying at the eastern university for the first time. She has been employed with the Provincial Forestry Department for the summer months. Maxine is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. J. Herbert of Quadra Street.

Getting ready for university can be fun if the work is done in a group! And these five third-year students, from left, Angie Mar, Barbara Wallace, Carole Salonen, Barbara Geddes and Sharon Plows, are doing just this. They are making curtains and pillow covers for their dormitory on the campus at University of British Columbia. The five friends have attended Victoria College for the past two years.

Thuya Oriental Shrubs Excellent for Hedges!

By PENNY SAVER

It's the season when hedges should be planted of course . . . so by next summer, the bushy wall will hide as much as your knees in the garden!

Hedging materials are selling now at a local shrubbery shop. These include Thuya Oriental . . . a handsome shrub with fine thick branches, to mask-like veiling! This shrub is selling at 69 cents or 10 for $6.50.

Cypressus lansonian . . . sounds fascinating but actually its only the long name for cypress shrub! Anyway, it's beautiful . . . and would be perfect in the traditional type garden. It's selling at 10 for $6.50 or 69 cents each. Oh yes—there are the three-year-old cypress shrubs for hedges at $1.25 each.

★ ★ ★

Scarlet thun beri berberis (I know, it's difficult to pronounce) is another wonderful hedging shrub. It grows as quickly as a weed, but not in all directions! It's $1.65 a shrub.

★ ★ ★

Here's something a little different . . . twizzors! Ever wished your tweezers had proper handles on 'em so they wouldn't keep slipping when you're trying to remove eyebrows or splinters? Now there is the twizzor—a combination tweezer and scissors. It's pocket size and costs just $1.

★ ★ ★

Practical furniture for the house always includes a tiny stool or two. These wonderful little pieces serve so many useful purposes . . . such as foot rests, kiddies' television seats or miniature tables.

I've found some softly upholstered ones in shades to tie in with the interior scheme of any home. They're selling at $4.25 each.

WHY GROW OLD?

By JOSEPHINE LOWMAN

You Must Assimilate What You Eat to Gain Weight

Underweight persons often make desperate efforts to gain weight. They stuff themselves, eat lots of rich foods, and then toss about on their beds for nine hours each night. Then, when the end result is a poor complexion and a stomach ache, then they decide to give the whole thing up and from then on blame their underweight on glands or ancestors.

However, when you persevere and do overcome the reasons for underweight and correct them, you often will notice a great improvement in the condition of the hair and the nails. "Beauty" is one of the by-products of a well-nourished body.

It is necessary to furnish the body with the materials it needs, but it is also essential to proper weight to assimilate an adequate amount of what you consume. Sometimes persons who are underweight eat large amounts, but stay thin. If you do not assimilate well, you never will put on those needed extra pounds.

Here is where vitamins play an important part. The vitamin B family has been found to help in assimilation as well as in increasing the appetite. You can eat your fill of fat-building foods, but unless you have vitamins to work for you, it does you no good.

Milk is an excellent food because it gives you so many elements you need. Other important aids to that figure you will want to keep are lots of sleep, rest to avoid nervous tension, lack of worry, outdoor life, mild exercises, and a properly balanced diet with lots of calories in small packages thrown in—such as cream, nuts and oils.

A gain in weight often is important for beauty's sake as well as health's. Healthy and beautiful hair is dependent on a healthy body, and is one of the happy results of a well-balanced and sane routine.

If you wish to have my leaflet "Nine-Day Gaining Diet", send a stamped, self-addressed envelope with your request for leaflet No. 41. Address Josephine Lowman, in care of this newspaper.

Soft, Fluffy and Elegant Furs High Fashion For Fall Season in Coats, Suits and Hats

Back in fur fashion this year are the fluffy, downy furs that make a woman look as if she's wrapped in a cloud.

This doesn't mean that sleeker furs are out. It just means that they have company.

Nona

Fur salons are bursting with smart new coats. Ensembles, suits, and dresses are fur trimmed. In a recent fashion show a muff and a hat of red fox created quite a sensation.

So, let's get on with the story of long-haired and downy furs.

Raccoon: From the United States. A bushy grey top hair with brown underhair. Very warm and sturdy, used natural for sports coats; sheared for all-purpose wear. Inexpensive and long wearing.

Lynx: Found in Canada, United States and Russia. Soft, silky, very long fur in natural beige blended with darker tone. Used for jackets, stoles, coat and suit collars. Expensive.

Red Fox: From United States, Alaska, Greenland and Russia. Red Fox in its natural state, has grey underhair topped by tawny red and beige long hairs. Used natural for jackets, stoles and muffs. Sheared and dyed fo rcoats. Inexpensive.

Blue Fox: Canada, Greenland and Norway. Mixture of creamy beige and grey. Thick, fluffy texture. Used for jackets, stoles, capes, muffs. Low to medium priced, depending on the quality.

White Fox: Canada, Greenland, Alaska, Scandinavia and Russia. Used natural or dyed pastel colors. grey or black. It is extravagant looking, yet moderately priced fur.

Platina Fox: United States, Canada, Rusia, Czechoslovakia and Scandinavia. Ranch-bred fox in lovely mixtures of grey and white.

Silver Fox: Canada, United States, Scandinavia. Mixture of black and white hairs. Finest skins have most white hairs and the deepest pelts. Used for jackets, wraps, stoles and muffs. Now moderately priced. Wears well.

Ermine: Russia, Scandinavia, Canada. Small species of weasel in pure white or pale beige (summer ermine). Luxury evening fur. Expensive and delicate, but warm.

Sable: Russia, China and Manchuria. A rich brown, thick fluffy fur used for fabulously expensive coats and one, two or multiple skin scarves, capes or stoles. Very few skins reach this country. "Crown" sables, the finest, largest animals found in the Barguzin section of Russia were so called because they were reserved as gifts of the Czar to other crown heads.

Chinchilla: United States, South America and Canada. This delectable fluffy grey fur, once the rarest and most expensive, is now ranch grown and becoming more available at less-than-astronomical prices. Delicate and warm and requires care. Used for jackets and stoles.

Fisher: Canada and Labrador. Larger than sable. Dark brown fur with darker top hair. Rare fur used in luxury coats and wraps, but long wearing and handsome.

That covers the story of the well known furs with the exception of mink. The many interesting mutations of mink which have been introduced make this a story in itself.

"Furred Fantasy" A beige basket weave wool costume in three parts, box pleated skirt, overblouse and jacket luxuriously furred with Canadian lynx from the Larry Aldrich fall 1958 collection.

"Harmony" A new alliance is formed for daytime wear. South American spotted cat and natural Canadian lynx meet at the neckline of this slender wrap coat creating a wonderfully chic look for coming blustery days.

DEAR ABBY . . .

SOME LIKE IT LONG

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: Everyone in our office howled over the letter from the woman who complained because her husband was getting bald and had a crew cut thereby making him look like a picked chicken. Our boss is also balding, but he won't face it. He hangs onto the few very long wisps of hair he has, drapes them around his head in a most artistic fashion. He looks positively ridiculous! On him a crew cut would look better.—The Office Gang.

★ ★ ★

DEAR ABBY: I seldom write to newspapers but this little item has been bothering me for a long time and I thought if you'd mention it in your column it might do some good. I work in the circulation department of a newspaper. So many carriers have trouble collecting their money. Some customers make the boys come back three and four times. Don't these people realize that the carriers are in business for themselves and they have to pay for the newspapers whether they collect their money on time or not? If they knew how hard those boys work to get their collections in on time, they would think twice before turning them away. This goes for all newspaper boys—whether they are 6 or 60. Give those kids a break, Abby, and print this.—Grace U.

DEAR GRACE: By the Grace of Grace—it's printed. Happy collecting boys!

DEAR ABBY: I am a boy 14 and had a job (if you want to call it that) for the summer. My father told me to go to a certain place and apply for a job. I got it without any trouble. There was nothing for me to do there and I was only in the way. I heard from one of the girls who works there that my father was paying my salary. I would rather have played baseball this summer. What do you make of a deal like this?—In the Way.

DEAR IN: Your father "meant well" but he was off base a country mile in the way he handled the situation. "Cooked up" jobs for youngsters are a handicap to those who fall heir to them. A boy who doesn't have what it takes to get a job of his own doesn't deserve to have one.

DEAR ABBY: It's a known fact that a woman should look glamorous for her husband at all times, but if I don't put my hair up in pin curls and wear a net at night I am a mess the next day. I can't fuss with my hair during the day because I work with him! My husband doesn't like the way I look at night but he wants me to look "just so" during the day, so what should I do?—Middle-Aged Wife.

DEAR WIFE: Perhaps you need a new permanent so that you wouldn't have to pin-curl your hair every night? If that's out—shop around for a cute new hair net. They have them now.

Autumn Tones in Church At Afternoon Ceremony

Apple green gowns worn by the bridal attendants contrasted beautifully with the autumn tones of church decorations at the wedding this afternoon of Carol Lenora Smith and Irvin Bruce Champion.

The young couple were married in the Church of St. George the Martyr, Cadboro Bay, by Rev. William Hills. The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John H. Smith, Taylor Street, and her groom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Irvin R. Champion, Hampshire Road.

Entering the chrysanthemum-decked church on the arm of her father, the bride was radiant in a white silk organza gown over bridal satin. A cummerbund marked the waistline and the full skirt swept into a chapel train. The scoop neckline was edged with lace applique. Her finger tip veil was held by a coronet of organza and pearls and she carried a bouquet of white roses and heather.

Organza over taffeta gowns were worn by a trio of attendants, Miss Gail Champion, maid of honor; Miss Sandra Smith, bridesmaid, and Miss Jan Champion, junior bridesmaid. The dresses of senior attendants were styled with side panels of organza caught up in rose-like clusters. Bodices featured short sleeves extending from sabrina necklines. They carried bouquets of bronze chrysanthemums, and had flat silk bow bandeaux. Junior attendant wore a short dress with stand-up collar, puffed sleeves and full skirt.

A light beige suit of wool broadcloth was worn by the bride for the wedding trip. Her accessories were in tan shade and she had a corsage of Talisman roses.

Bells Chime For Wedding At Cathedral

Dean Brian Whitlow officiated at the service for the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Frank E. Davis and the son of Mrs. Hazel Sherratt. White chrysanthemums and delphiniums decorated the church for the occasion. Music was provided by Graham Steed at the organ.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride wore a street-length sheath of ivory lace with matching jacket and ivory-toned feather hat. Her bouquet was of stephanotis and ivy.

Bridesmaid Miss Mary O'Brien chose a streeth-length sheath of ivory silk taffeta with matching jacket. Her headpiece was trimmed with delphiniums to match the flowers in her bouquet. Miss Carol Davis was flower girl for her aunt, and wore a short frock of ivory silk with headdress and bouquet similar to Miss O'Brien's.

Best man was FO N. McDonald, RCAF, and the groom's brother, James Sherratt, ushered with William Finlayson. H. A. Main proposed a toast to the bride at a reception in Oak Bay Beach Hotel.

Future home for the newlyweds will be Royston, B.C.

Ceremony in St. Saviour's

Rev. Douglas Kendall officiated at the ceremony recently, which united Marlene Jo'n, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. L. Mellings of Craigflower Road, and Robert William Hackwell, son of Mr. and Mrs. H. Hackwell of Cordova Bay. The wedding took place in St. Saviour's Anglican Church.

A ballerina length gown was worn by the bride as she entered the church on the arm of her father. It was fashioned with lace bodice in strapless style, topped by a tiny net jacket. Her chapel length veil was held in place with a tiara and her jewelry was a pearl necklace and matching earrings. Her bouquet was of red roses and stephanotis.

A yellow net gown over taffeta was worn by her maid of honor, Miss Patricia Higgins. Her headband was of white velvet flowers and she carried a colonial bouquet of pink carnations centred with roses. Miss Donna Mellings was junior bridesmaid wearing a white nylon organdy dress posed over green taffeta. Her bandeau and bouquet were identical to maid of honor's.

Best man was Errol Jernslet. A reception followed the service at the home of the bride's parents, where a three-tier wedding cake centred the bridal table, made by Mr. and Mrs. W. Goldfinch. R. Miller proposed the toast.

The newlyweds plan to live at 314 Obed Avenue.

"In Lighter Vane"

By Maurice Humber

I WAS up on our roof, in a squallin' rain,
Attaching . . . (of ALL things) . . . a weather-vane;
And we needed this, as the G.F. said,
"Just like we need . . . a hole in the head."
'Twas in an Ad, that came to our store,
"Never, at THIS price . . . had they made it before."
It has pointers for north, south, east 'n' west,
And the mallard on top, I thot 'twas best.
It spins with the arrow, when the wind is harsh,
It's just taking off . . . up out from a marsh.

I had a terrible time to fix it up straight,
But it's cast aluminum, so there isn't much weight.
I could've had a horse, going rou horse, going round 'n' round,
But it never could roll, or get a hoof on the ground.
And it would've never had a measure of oats to munch,
And never an apple to chew & crunch.
It could just gallop & twist, up there in the blue,
And only rest when the winds were thru.
It would have got so tired in sun & hail,
With its flying mane & outstretched tail.
So I chose the duck, 'cause we live by the sea,
So it's up in the air . . . alive & free.
I backed down the ladder, off the shingles I'd messed,
I sed to "her," "it's blowing sow . . . by sow-west."
She said . . . "So what? . . . I COULDN'T CARE LESS."

Nurse Travels 'Round World

By JUDY NICHOLSON

She calls herself a wandering nurse! Miss Elaine Deane of Invercargo, N.Z. is travelling and working her way around the world.

This 22-year-old adventurer is visiting Victoria for a month. She is staying with her uncle and aunt, Mr. and Mrs. J. M. Deane at their Amphion Street home. Her plans for the balance of her trip are many and varied, but already she has had many interesting experiences.

"Fiji is fabulous!" she tells you, "never in my life have I seen so many natives who were not natives!"

Explaining this point, she says, "Well, I noticed there were really only a handful of Fijians compared to a large number of people from India, United States and Britain who had lived there for many years, and claim to be natives!"

She speaks also of an English rugby game at Nadi in the South Sea Islands. "I discovered that the Fijians play this game in their bare feet!"

World traveller Miss Elaine Deane is wearing a self-designed dress made by a Fijian dressmaker. It's of soft combed cotton in a caramel brown shade.

From Fiji Miss Deane went to Honolulu, where she met "many charming people and just lived a life of luxury with swimming and parties all the time!"

Of course she doesn't expect the whole tour to be so carefree.

"I plan to make my way to England, where I'll set up headquarters. By that I mean, I'll take a job, either in an English hospital or work as a private nurse."

After working overseas for a while and visiting the Continent, Miss Deane plans to head for South Africa where she says "I'll be in the centre of things on the other side of the world."

Nurse Elaine has one main rule which she firmly advocates for all young people who travel. "Unless you are taking a trip with a group of friends who share similar interests and meet people easily, then . . . travel alone. You can do so much more by yourself and you're completely independent.

Mrs. Aaron Parfitt

Mrs. Parfitt now lives in her own apartment at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Smith. Among her many interests are knitting, canasta and bridge, which she says she doesn't play well.

"But neither do the others. I play as well as they do, so it works out nicely."

Among the many friends and relatives who will be here to help celebrate her birthday are her children and grandchildren. Her son, Ray Parfitt, also lives in Victoria. Coming from Oroville, California, will be a granddaughter, Helen Montrey, with Mr. Montrey and their son Ray. 9 IN MEMORIAM

HEAL—In loving memory of my dear husband Earle, taken suddenly Sept. 13, 1957.

I seem to see in the soft dim light
A face I loved the best.
And think of him when the sun's last ray
Goes down in the far-off West.
I miss you no less as the time passes on
Than I did on the day of your going;
For absence can never close the door of my heart
And the lamp of my love is still glowing.
Your heart was the truest in all the wide world;
Your love the best to recall;
For no one on earth could take your place,
You are the dearest of all.
—Ever remembered, Margie.

KIRKHAM — Treasured memories of our dearly beloved sister Eleanor, who passed away Sept. 13, 1956.

Dearer still as years depart,
Your memories live within our hearts,
Our memories of you are a keepsake
With which we shall never part.
God has you in his keeping,
We have you in our hearts.
Sadly missed by your brothers and sisters and their families.

PETTIT—In ever loving memory of a dear husband and father, John Pettit, who passed away Sept. 14, 1957.

I often sit and think of him
When I am all alone,
For memory is the only thing
That grief can call its own.
Sadly missed by Alexandra, Dianne, Sandie, Jean, Bill, daughter, Lavern, and families.

B.C. Asks Ottawa For Winter Job Aid

50-50 Cost Split Requested For Huge Highway Expansion

VANCOUVER (CP) — Highways Minister P. A. Gaglardi asked the federal government Friday to pay half the cost of a $31,400,000 B.C. highway program as part of a federal-provincial scheme to alleviate unemployment this winter.

He made the request in a special meeting with Works Minister Howard Green, here for a Progressive Conservative leadership convention.

The highways minister presented Mr. Green with a brief which said unemployment in B.C. this winter is expected to be close to the high level of last winter and listed the highways program among three proposed jointly-financed works programs which would provide jobs.

ACCESS ROADS

The other two plans are for development of forest access roads, at a total of $29,000,000 over five years, and for parks development.

The highways program calls for building 126.6 miles of arterial roads in the lower mainland, the Prince Rupert area, the interior and Vancouver Island. Work would start Oct. 1 and would be complete by June 30, 1959, and would provide jobs for at least 2,000 men, Mr. Gaglardi said.

The minister said after his meeting that he originally suggested the program to the federal government five months ago but had received no reply.

WORK STARTED

Mr. Gaglardi said in some cases the projects call for continuation or completion of work already started and in other would involve new starts. He said the provincial government would pay its half share partly out of the highway funds already approved and partly with new money.

The province has budgeted $69,000,000 so far this year for highway construction.

ALREADY OUTLINED

Under the heading of forest roads, the document said the work would be in provincial public working circle areas, involving annual contributions of $5,000,000 by each government.

The brief said projects under the third section, covering public park access and development, already had been outlined by Recreation Minister Earle Westwood to Northern Affairs Minister Alvin Hamilton.

WHY I SUPPORT COMMUNITY CHEST

Today: Malcolm Sutherland, Druggist.

"It's not a difficult thing to explain why I support the Community Chest. I do so because I could not live with myself if I did not.

"It is not pleasant to see need staring you in the face as you go about your day's work, yet do nothing about it. We cannot pass by as the men did in the story of the Good Samaritan.

"We must help, we must go to the poor and sick and forgotten and give them what they need.

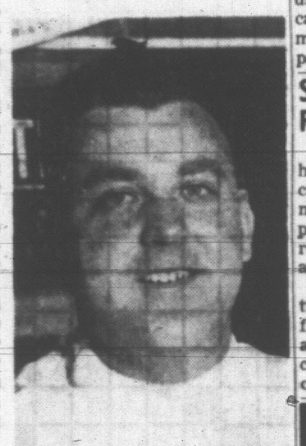

"How? Well, not all of us can be social workers. We're not all in a position to render aid directly. But we can do our bit and sometimes that bit is just as important as doing a lot, if it is done in the right spirit.

"We can give money to the Community Chest. I know the money will be used to the best possible advantage. They will help the surgeon and caseworker to use his God-given talents on our behalf.

"If we are going to better the community we live in, we must see that by giving support to the Chest we are indirectly helping Red Feather workers to act for us.

"The work they do is done by proxy, as it were. Done by others, who need our backing every day of the year.

"What do we get out of it? Why, satisfaction and the comfort that comes from a good deed, done well. That is why I support the Community Chest."

550 Educators Here Next Week For Convention

About 550 members of the Canadian Education Association will meet in Victoria next week to discuss subjects ranging from science and mathematics in secondary schools to teacher recruiting.

The 35th annual convention will be held Tuesday through Friday in the Empress Hotel. The association last met here in 1950.

The CEA is an inter-provincial association of education authorities supported by education departments of all the provinces. Ministers of education have been asked to attend on the personal invitation of B.C. Education Minister Leslie Peterson.

Among principal speakers will be the association president, former deputy minister of education in B.C., Dr. H. L. Campbell, now superintendent of Canada's national defence department schools in Germany. He is flying directly from Germany to attend the conclave.

PREMIER TO SPEAK

Also scheduled for a major address is Dr. N. A. M. McKenzie, president of University of British Columbia.

Premier W. A. C. Bennett will speak at a dinner given by the provincial government for members and their wives.

Among primary subjects for discussion will be aims in educational research, the objective made possible by a $100,000 Imperial Oil Ltd. grant this year.

Supervisor-Caretaker For Community Centre

CHEMAINUS—Graeme Cave has been appointed supervisor-caretaker of Chemainus Community Centre, subject to approval of the new board of directors to be elected at the annual meeting Wednesday.

Mr. Cave, a well-known district athlete, will be responsible for organizing adult and youth activities and will act as head coach for Saturday basketball clinics.

SOME INTRODUCTIONS IN ORDER

Begin journey at bottom left (vertical arrow); stay within path lines. Meet Beanie's friends in 1, 2, 3 order, and return to starting point (bottom arrow).

TRUST YOUR EYES

PETE'S CUTTING UP

From a huge sheet of paper that is 43 inches wide by 154 inches long, printer Pete wishes to cut a maximum number of small sheets seven inches wide by 11 inches long. How many sheets of this size can be cut from the larger sheet?

Trust your eyes sufficiently to make a clear-cut decision? You may be sorry in this case.

Two dotted lines bisecting the parallelogram (at right) pose this interesting question: which line is longest?

After you have decided, use a ruler to check on your answer. This is another example of a puzzling optical illusion.

Answer: Eighty-six sheets can be cut without any waste.

TAKE A WALK

A group of hikers set out for a destination seventy-two miles distant. Stops were decided on at certain distances along the way for refreshments and rest. Just to make things interesting, the leader stated the distance of six of the stops from the starting point as follows:

1. The middle third of the first third of the last half of the hike.

2. The last third of the first half of the last half of the trip.

3. The first third of the second third of the first half of the total distance.

4. The last third of the first half of the first half of the trip.

5. The middle third of the first half of the last quarter of the hike.

6. The first quarter of the second half of the last third of the trip.

What was the distance of each of these six stops from the starting point

Solution: The distance of the various stops from the starting point are 44 miles, 54 miles, 16 miles, 18 miles, 60 miles and 63 miles, respectively.

OVER A BARREL?

Suppose you wanted to measure out 10 quarts of fluid from a barrel, but had only a 7-quart and an 11-quart can with which to do it. Could you?

Of course, you'd be expected to pour various quantities from container to container to do it.

Answer: Yes, this way—Fill the 7-qt. vessel and pour into the 11-qt. vessel. Fill the 7 again and from it fill the 11; this leaves 3 quarts in the 7; empty the 11 and pour the 3 into the 11; then fill the 7, you would then have 3 quarts in one vessel and 7 in the other.

RIDDLE: What is it of which we have two in every year, two every week, and at least two in every day?

SPACE HOPPER

Paste the figure to thicker paper or cardboard. Cut it out along the outside edges. Also cut out the two circular areas at the bottom.

Insert two fingers through openings and bug can be made to walk, run, jump, dance, etc.

WHAT TIME IS IT?

If there are 10 times as many seconds left in the hour as there are minutes left in the day, but only half as many minutes remaining in the day as there will be hours left in the week when the day is done, what is the time?

Solution: 10:48 p.m. Sunday. (Sunday is the first day of the week; at midnight Sunday there will be 144 hours left.)

Ores and metals represent from 6 to 8 per cent of the value of all world trade.

AROUND THE WORLD

With JOHN MANNING

University student John Manning of 3225 Ripon Rd., has taken a year off from classroom studies to "vagabond" around the world. The 21-year-old Victorian is writing his impressions of the places he is visiting and the things he is seeing.

By JOHN MANNING

MADURA, India—She was an old ship.

Her rusting hull rose bleakly above the water. A fraying line dropped down from the bow to the dock and great gashes of rust stood out all over the superstructure.

Under the watchful eye of an officer four natives were loading boxes into a cargo net and sweating profusely from the heat.

Somehow the ship seemed out of place. She should have been tied up in some forgotten island of the South Pacific and not in Northern Ceylon.

I went aboard.

An obliging crewmember showed me the third class passengers' deck.

Standing Room Only

The deck was already crowded but more passengers kept coming. They came lugging boxes and sacks and little, frightened children.

One old woman, wrinkled and beaten down from years of toil, sat next to me. Her bare feet showed from beneath the ragged edges of a sari. Large gold ornaments swung like pendulums from her ears. She had three front teeth.

After a few minutes of sitting there she undid the string from around a sack which was by her side, reached in and drew out a comb. Then she hobbled over to a tap near the railing and putting her head under, turned it on. Water sprayed everywhere. Most of it went over a fat man who had been asleep and he yelled at her. She paid no attention and the man moved away.

The ship sailed three hours late.

Bleak Alternatives

On the way across to India the sea was calm, sparkling in the intense sunlight. The trip was only a matter of hours before the low coastline of India crept up over the horizon and we docked in the port of Dhanushkodi. I realized then that if I did not get clear of the ship and through customs at once I would miss the train to Madura. Which meant sleeping in the station or on the beach — neither of which looked good.

The guard at the gangway was asking everyone for their ticket.

"This is third class!" he said with surprise.

"Yes, but do you see that train over there? It's waiting for me."

While he glanced over at the train, I went down the gangway. It was my only chance. He did not call me back.

Unforgettable

The train waited out in the hot sun, people peering here and there out of the windows. A little Indian man sat opposite me. Another man was asleep in the baggage rack and snoring very loudly. He woke up as soon as the train started to move, looked around and went back to sleep.

That was a train ride I'll never forget.

Moving inland was like moving into an oven. The air grew drier and hotter and hotter. Then came the station stops where more and more people crowded into the car. Few paid. This was accomplished by jumping off at every station just before the train stopped. It was quite comical. As the train drew to a halt Indians leaped out of the doorways and hid behind any trains that were on the opposite track. One holy man in his orange robe was an expert.

That night I slept on a roof in Madura. It resulted purely from the kindness of an Indian boy whom I had met while trying to find my way about the city. We had rice and curry in a small restaurant where you ate with your fingers. He had a small room in a building overlooking one of the main streets. It was too hot to sleep in the room so I took my sleeping bag up on the roof. There the stars were out and the last thing I can remember was looking up at them and hearing the sound of horse-drawn carriages on the street below.

Kingston-Upon-Thames, near London, England, was the coronation site for several Saxon kings.

$250 Million Canadian Aid Planned for Commonwealth

Advance Nod To Finlayson In Tory Vote

By PETE LOUDON, Times Political Reporter

VANCOUVER—According to most corridor oracles i will be Deane Finlayson who leads the Progressive Conservative Party when the shouting dies down at Vancouver Hotel tonight.

But the race, which was to be decided by balloting of 600 delegates between 2 and 3 p.m. today, was expected to end in a photo finish.

Last minute opinion polls gave a slight edge to the Finlayson campaign over that of Dr. Desmond F. Kidd. It is said committee workers for the present leader had marshalled 375 sure votes before balloting began.

Veteran political observers say this convention will stand out in history. Few can remember a leadership election that was so much in doubt to the final hour.

CAREFUL WATCH

Committee rooms of both candidates have been watched carefully. If there was a large crowd in Dr. Kidd's room, an hour later a crowd of similar size was packing the Finlayson quarters.

If one candidate received a standing ovation, his opponent got a welcome two minutes later of similar intensity.

If the corridors on the fourth floor were thick with Finlayson buttons, observers found Kidd ribbons draped all over delegates congregating on the fifth floor.

When Deane Finlayson gave a rousing speech, Dr. Kidd followed it with another address of equal merit. (But on the whole, speeches by both candidates have been described as lacking fire. On major issues, the two candidates were in agreement).

What gives the edge to Finlayson? Most feel it is the fact he is a young man who has already proven himself by sticking with the party during the tough years.

Dr. Kidd, while showing all the outward signs of a good leader, hasn't been around long. A party member for less than two years, he is still a newcomer to many of the delegates.

Although he has the avowed support of the young Conservatives, he was facing judgment by delegates who are mainly old-time party members.

CHALLENGER AND CHAMPION

An even, ding-dong battle was being waged in Vancouver today by Dr. Desmond F. Kidd, left, and Deane Finlayson for leadership of the B.C. Conservative Party. Just before balloting began this afternoon observers gave a slim edge to Finlayson who has held the post for seven years.

Arsenal Takes First Place In Football

LONDON (UPI) — Arsenal, once the glamour team of English soccer, took over first place in the league standings today by defeating neighboring Tottenham, 3-1.

The victory gave Arsenal a total of 10 points from seven games played. Tottenham's vulnerable defence now has yielded 18 goals in seven games, dropping the team among the tail-enders of the first division with only three points.

West Ham, which led the league going into day's games, suffered a 4-2 setback at the hands of Nottingham Forest and dropped back into a tie for second place with Luton and Bolton. Luton and Bolton played a scoreless tie.

Everton scored its first points of the season by upsetting Manchester City, 3-1, at Manchester, and the Wolverhampton Wanderers edged the Blackburn Rovers, 2-1.

Ex-'Freedom Fighter' Returned to Hungary

NEW WESTMINSTER (CP) — A Hungarian "freedom-fighter" branded a Communist organizer has been returned to Hungary by the Canadian Immigration Department.

Zigmond Pater, 27, described by officials as an "intense" man known to have been in contact with Communist party leaders in Vancouver, left with five others who had asked to go home on compassionate grounds.

Pater requested the government to pay his way to Hungary a month ago. "We were only too happy to assist him out of the country," said an official.

Pater told authorities he would "rather live under Communism and have a job than be unemployed in a democracy."

Stop China's War-Roar Ike Tells Khrushchev

NEWPORT, R.I. (AP)—President Eisenhower today appealed to Russia to prevail on Communist China to renounce use of force in Formosa Strait area and turn to peaceful negotiations.

In a new message to Soviet Premier Khrushchev, Eisenhower criticized the Russian leader for what he called a "one-sided denunciation" of United States policy in the Far East.

At the same time, Eisenhower made it clear that the U.S. has no intention of pulling its forces out of the Far East as Khrushchev demanded early this week.

Referring to Khrushchev's 4,000-word letter to him, Eisenhower said:

NO EFFORT FOR PEACE

"I regret to say I do not see in your letter any effort to find that common language which mon language for peace, I suggest you urge these leaders to discontinue their military operations and to turn to a policy of peaceful settlement of the Taiwan dispute."

While Eisenhower was conciliatory in tone in that respect, he was firm in making it clear that the United States is ready to fight in the Far East if the Communists push too far.

That also was the central theme of Eisenhower's television-radio address Thursday night.

FORMOSA TALKS OPEN SOON

WASHINGTON (UPI)—The United States and Red China have agreed to begin peace talks on the Formosa crisis in the next few days, informed sources said today.

The discussions will take place in Warsaw between U.S. Ambassador Jacob D. Beam and Red Chinese envoy Wang Ping-Nan.

Reds Again Repel Quemoy Supply Convoy

Four Nationalist Chinese supply ships were forced to withdraw after unloading only a small portion of their cargo.

Within one hour the Reds poured more than 7,000 high-explosive shells into Liaolo Beach where the vessels were trying to unload supplies for the besieged Nationalist outpost island.

This was the third unsuccessful attempt by the Nationalists to run the blockade with U.S. warships escorting them within three miles of Quemoy. It was the first attempt under cover of darkness.

The American spokesman said the ships remained at the beach for 23 minutes before the heavy fire forced them to withdraw.

HONG KONG (Reuters) — Communist China today issued its fifth "serious warning" on the intrusion of United States warships into its territorial waters, the New China News Agency said.

moval of the danger existing in the current situation in the Taiwan (Formosa) area.

"On the contrary, the description of this situation contained in your letter seems designed to serve the ambitions of international Communism rather than to present the facts. I also note that you have addressed no letter to the Chinese Communists leaders urging moderation upon them.

"If your letter to me is not merely a vehicle for onesided denunciation of United States action, but is indeed intended to reflect a desire to find a com-

Oak Bay police today were conducting an investigation into three overnight burglaries in the [illegible] including theft of jewels with an estimated value of $1,500.

Police said the release of further details at this time would hamper the investigation.

Other departments in the Victoria area were co-operating with Oak Bay police on the case.

The jewel theft, from a private residence, as were the other burglaries, occurred Thursday night.

Both of the other entries took place Friday night and thefts included jewels, cash and other items, police said.

'INSOLENT' AFRICAN LIFE WORTH $140

PARY, South Africa (Reuters) — A 20-year-old white mother Friday was fined £50 ($140) for killing an African woman after the judge said he took into account that the servant had been "insolent."

Mrs. Marie de Wet was found guilty of shooting the 28-year-old African woman servant in the stomach and warned by the judge to be careful of firearms in the future.

A policeman testified that Mrs. de Wet told him the African woman had refused to do the washing or clean the house and had burned a petticoat belonging to her.

'THE CEMENT'

We've Got Sentimental Backbone

TORONTO (CP) — The immense power of emotional and sentimental ties are the backbone of the British Commonwealth, Viscount Hailsham of London said Friday night.

"The cement of the Commonwealth is not only, or even primarily, economic," the lord president of the Privy Council and chairman of Britain's Conservative party told the Canadian Bar Association at its annual dinner.

"I believe that we are too slow to recognize, perhaps in a sense too shy to assert, the immense power of emotional and sentimental ties.

"Though most of us would desire something more showy and perhaps more intellectually satisfying, we cannot but be grateful that we have an association as flexible, as sensitive, as useful and as effective as the British Commonwealth of Nations."

Police Believe Truck May Be Tip To Hit-Run Death

Latest lead in an unsolved hit-run July 5 which took the life of Harry V. Mills, 78, of 1403 Ryan, was a green pickup truck abandoned about two months in bush near Sidney.

RCMP were investigating the truck today in an effort to establish ownership and reason for the truck's abandonment.

City police have been searching since the death of Mr. Mills a few days after the hit-run at Cook and Hillside, for a green pickup truck, about 1950 model, seen leaving the accident.

MONTREAL (CP)—A huge Canadian aid program for needy Commonwealth countries, ranging perhaps to more than $250,000,000 over the next three years, likely will be disclosed before the two-week, 11-country Commonwealth trade and economic conference opening here Monday.

At the same time, it was learned Friday, Canada plans to launch a vigorous attack against Britain's long-maintained import restrictions on goods from Canada and the United States, charging they are unjustified and discriminatory.

Initial shadow-boxing, undertaken at a confidential meeting of Commonwealth advisers Friday, indicated Britain will put up a stiff defence of her curbs, informants said.

Her government advisers were reported to have argued that Britain's accumulation of large reserves of U.S. dollars and gold —now totalling more than $3,000,000,000—is no indication she is on the road to complete recovery. The economic road was still precarious and she had to be cautious.

AIMED AT ASIA

However, the Canadian government delegation likely will continue the attack and some reference to this may be contained in the initial statement of welcome to be read by Finance Minister Fleming at Monday's opening.

The aid program would be disclosed later in the week, perhaps by Prime Minister Diefenbaker when he addresses the delegates at a dinner Thursday. The Canadian hope is that the offer will encourage other Commonwealth countries to take similar steps, helping to overcome poverty in the Asian countries, Ghana and the former British colonies moving to full independence, such as the West Indies Federation and Nigeria.

GIFTS OF FOOD

Here's how the Canadian aid program likely will shape up:

1. A boost in the annual $35,000,000 Colombo Plan contribution to south and southeast Asia perhaps to $50,000,000 a year.

2. Annual gifts of food, mostly wheat, to Asian countries, valued at some $25,000,000. Coupled with this offer would be a Canadian pledge to "consult" other wheat-producing countries, such as Australia and the U.S., before the food gifts are made, to avoid charges that Canada might be upsetting normal commercial wheat markets.

3. Direct aid to the West Indies of between $10,000,000 and $20,000,000 a year for capital expansion of that Caribbean area.

The Canadian Government aid program would be established on a basis of continuing for at least the next three years. At that time the situation might be reviewed and the program revised or extended, depending on economic developments in Canada and the receiving countries.

Vicious Crime Wave Hits Vancouver

VANCOUVER (CP) — Two men were robbed, a woman taxi-driver was assaulted and a man with a gun tried to break into a suburban apartment in a night of vicious crime on the lower mainland Friday night.

G. A. Barclay, 67, a Canadian Legion official, was beaten by two thugs and robbed of about $100 when he stepped from his car outside his Vancouver home.

An unidentified woman taxi-driver told police she was beaten, choked and criminally assaulted by a man who asked her into a house to help him subdue a "drunken brother." Police today were holding a 24-year-old laborer in connection with the assault.

Virginia Joins 'Rebellion' As Faubus Closes Schools

LITTLE ROCK, Ark. (AP)—The governors of Arkansas and Virginia have ordered some schools closed in their states in the wake of the U.S. Supreme Court decision that integration of Negro students must proceed immediately at Arkansas' Little Rock Central High School.

This action was taken only a few hours after the unanimous decision of the court in Washington Friday.

At Newport, R.I., President Eisenhower issued a statement saying that anarchy might result from defiance of the court's integration stand and urging the people to avoid it.

Governor Orval Faubus of Arkansas signed laws passed recently authorizing him to close four senior high schools—including Central and a Negro school—in Little Rock. The schools had been scheduled to open Monday.

Faubus said he issued the order to avoid "impending violence and disorder." He set Oct. 7 as the date for a special election on the question of integrating the schools.

In Virginia, Governor J. Lindsay Almond, Jr., announced the closing of Front Royal High School in Warren County, effective Monday. It will be the first school to shut down under the state's plan for resisting desegregation.

By VICTOR J. MACKIE, Times Ottawa Correspondent

MONTREAL—Delegates arriving here for the Commonwealth trade and economic conference anticipate some expansion of trade and measures for mobilizing more development resources may follow their talks, but they do not look for spectacular results.

The conference opens Monday in Montreal's newly built Queen Elizabeth Hotel, the most modern convention hotel in the world. More than 150 delegates will attend and they will have staffs that will double their number.

Canada's Progressive Conservatives have been urging the convening of such a conference for years. At times it appeared that the Tory call for such a Commonwealth meeting was based on a conviction that if only the members of the Commonwealth would hold such an economic conference all their economic troubles would disappear.

Now that the conference has actually come into being the Conservative government appears to be less certain that it will produce magical solutions to the many and varied economic and trade problems. Canadians and other delegates arrived at Montreal with a spirit of "cautious optimism" not too sure what could be accomplished, but hopeful that some good would come out of the two-week talks.

The British have stressed their desire to examine every possible means of extending Commonwealth trade. In the course of these discussions recent Canadian restrictions on certain British textiles and amendments to the Customs Act to tighten up its anti-dumping provisions will come under criticism.

Anxious Not to Antagonize U.S.

While seeking to expand trade within the Commonwealth there will be no suggestion of widening British preferential tariffs, it is understood.

The delegates will want to take no action that might antagonize the United States. While there will be strenuous efforts and exploratory talks aimed at increasing trade that increase will not be at the expense of the United States, Canadian government spokesmen have insisted.

Australia's minister of trade, Rt. Hon. John McEwen, one of the first to arrive in Montreal, made no secret of the fact his country is not happy with its export-import trade disparity.

He said the chief problem in Australian-Canadian trade is his country's shortage of dollars. He said he expected however, that the sterling areas would be strengthened during next week's talks.

Mr. McEwen said Australia regarded as serious the world fall in prices of primary commodities, particularly agricultural products. He said the possibility of devising some scheme of price stabilization will probably be discussed.

Britons Favor Business Missions

The British are coming to Canada convinced that Commonwealth trade can be given impetus through the exchange of missions of businessmen. This will be advocated rather than preferential tariffs.

A British plan for a Commonwealth bank may be dropped. There is a noticeable lack of enthusiasm in Canadian quarters. Canada appears convinced that it is unnecessary to have other agencies added to the World Bank and the International Monetary Fund.

New countries in the Commonwealth will be looking for sources of capital and other forms of aid.

the closing of any school that has admitted Negroes.

"NATIONAL TRAGEDY"

Georgia's Senator Richard B. Russell, one of the southern Democratic leaders, said "a great nationtl tragedy impends." He said the south's white citizens are law-abiding but they won't "surrender to the dictates of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People merely because that organization is able to use the present Supreme Court as its mouthpiece."

In Little Rock, Mrs. L. C. Bates, NAACP Arkansas director, was asked what she thought of the governor's action in ordering the schools closed.

"The Negro children will just have to wait like the rest of the children until the schools are opened," she said.

Faubus moved only hours after the Supreme Court said in effect that Central High, scene of racial riots and guarded by troops last year, must continue integration no matter how violent the opposition. The school board had sought a 2½-year delay in integration.

PRIVATE SCHOOLS

Faubus' apparent objective is to close the four Little Rock high schools — including all-Negro Horace Mann High—then open Central High and possibly others as private schools with the state paying tuition.

He appears to believe the state thus can avoid forced integration because the Supreme Court has not issued integration orders involving private schools.

The legislature two weeks ago gave him power to close schools faced with forcible racial mixing in classes. An 1875 law makes the use of public school facilities by private groups legal.

Minutes after he signed the school closing bill, Faubus accepted a summons in the state court suit filed by a woman who is a segregationist but does not want the schools closed.

The timing of the suit led to speculation that it involved more than met the eye but observers were unable to determine its exact meaning.

OTTAWA (CP)—L. Phillipe Picard, 59, Canada's ambassador to Argentina since late 1955, is leaving his post, it was disclosed here Friday. The decision of the former Liberal member of parliament was confirmed by Finance Minister Fleming, who said "politics have not entered into this decision."

DEBBIE REYNOLDS
. . . she seeks split

Divorce—and No Punches Pulled

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — The marriage of Debbie Reynolds and Eddie Fisher, once thought to be one of Hollywood's happiest couples, is on its way to the divorce courts.

Debbie Friday asked her lawyer to get her a divorce after Eddie blasted her hopes for a reconciliation.

"A breakup was inevitable," said Eddie. "The marriage would have come to an end even if I had never known Elizabeth Taylor. I alone accept full responsibility for its failure."

"It seems unbelievable to say that you can live happily with a man and not know he doesn't love you. But that—as God is my witness—is the truth."

Lawyers will meet next week to discuss the divorce.

Will Elizabeth's Taylor's name play a part in it?

WON'T SPARE LIZ

Any attempt to relieve Miss Taylor from any responsibility falls on completely deaf ears," said Debbie's lawyer, Frank B. Belcher. "I'm not going to spare anyone if it is necessary to protect the rights of Debbie and her two fine children."

Miss Taylor's dates with Fisher in New York last week preceded a domestic argument between Eddie and Debbie on his return here. After the spat he moved out.

Before she slipped into seclusion, Miss Taylor told reporters that "I'm not taking anything away from Debbie—because she never had it."

But, said Debbie Friday, "I had truly believed that we had found our happiness. I know I had. I now realize when you are deeply in love—how blind one can be. Obviously I was."

LONDON, Ont. (CP) — Pal Salaman, 49-year-old Hungarian immigrant, Friday night was found guilty of murder and sentenced to hang Nov. 26. He was charged with murdering Mrs. Joyce Alexander in her apartment July 26.

DEBBIE LEFT ON THE EASEL

Eddie Takes Liz Instead

MIAMI BEACH (UPI) — A life-size portrait of Debbie Reynolds—which the pert actress originally intended as a gift for hubby Eddie Fisher—rests on an artist's easel here with nobody to take it.

Artist Ralph Cowan told Miami newsmen that Miss Reynolds ordered the portrait made when she was here with her husband last spring. He said she planned to give it to him as a surprise at his birthday party in Hollywood Sept. 26.

But that was before their current separation.

"Now she's called with word that she doesn't want it," Cowan said.

To add to the confusion, Cowan said the painting was ordered after the young couple saw a similar life-size portrait Cowan did of Elizabeth Taylor.

The Taylor portrait has since been delivered to Fisher in Hollywood, the artist said.

"The man who ordered it painted never finished the payments," he explained. "Fisher bought it from me as a present for Liz, and it was delivered to him this week."

Cowan added:

"At the time they (Eddie and Debbie) both saw the picture in my studio, Debbie described Liz as 'the most beautiful woman I have ever seen' and said she was a 'wonderful person'."

Airman Found 2 Still Sought

EDMONTON (CP)—The air force has successfully completed one air search in the northwest and today will increase its efforts in another.

Found alive and well in northern British Columbia late Friday was Staff Sgt. K. E. Barber of the United States Air Force. His light plane crashed Monday after straying from his Alaska Highway route to his home base at Elmendorf, near Anchorage.

Still missing farther south, in northwestern Alberta, are forestry worker Richard Bolam, 29, of Edmonton and his passenger Don Roberts of Fort Vermilion, Alta. They, too, disappeared Monday on a short 40-mile flight to take provisions to firefighters in the region north of Grande Prairie.

Tories Whoop Up Storm In Leadership Battle

By PETE LOUDON
Times Political Reporter

VANCOUVER—With a rootin', tootin', whoopin' nomination night demonstration under its belt, the Progressive Conservative convention settled down today to the solemn business of choosing a leader.

To nobody's surprise, the choice will be between present leader Deane Finlayson and aspirant Dr. Desmond F. Kidd.

It was more like a U.S. political convention than the usually sedate Canadian variety.

If the Tory delegates intended to prove there was life in the old party yet, they succeeded—at least on a decibel basis.

FIGHTING SPEECHES

As party veteran Hon. H. H. Stevens put it: "If it isn't the best convention since 1902, it's certainly the noisiest."

Amid all the noise, the two candidates joined in fighting speeches asking for party loyalty—but each made a fighting speech on his own behalf.

Mr. Finlayson, who called the convention last summer to obtain what he describes as a "clear mandate," told the delegates Friday night that "I wish to assure myself and the public that I command the loyal and unselfish support of the majority of our party membership."

In turn, Dr. Kidd said that finally and inevitably "the hour of decision is with you.

"The year of decision is with this party," he said. "Emphatically, we are once again a major political force.

"Our opportunity is great. But our responsibility is so much greater."

YEARS NOT LOST

A massive ovation greeted Finlayson when he rose to speak. He reviewed the years since he took over the leadership in 1952 and said: "However, these years have not been lost.

"Had we not done our duty this party would not today be considered as the alternative to the crowd in Victoria. We would not be here in this convention."

The party leader reviewed Progressive Conservative provincial policy and criticized the Social Credit administration for a lack of policy.

Mr. Finlayson said British Columbia has reached the "point of catastrophe in labor discord."

The time had come for "a new, streamlined labor code to replace the present acts, many of the conditions of which are in conflict with the other.

"I do not believe that this is the time to use a big stick on labor although I will confess that certainly there is provocation in some quarters.

"I believe that this is a time for sober thought but it is also a time for action. I have said that the various forces should be brought together immediately to clean their own houses. I have also said that the government should review its entire labor legislation."

Dr. Kidd, who also got a room-shaking welcome, said it was "Time the people of B.C. were given the type of government they want."

WASTEFUL IDEAS

"They have had enough of flights of fancy," he said. "Enough of ideas conceived in haste and executed in waste. Our taxes are the highest in Canada—our debt also the highest. As your leader I will fight to see the people of B.C. are given the real facts of our finances."

Dr. Kidd talked about the north, which as a practising geologist he knows intimately.

He said: "We live in an area of large undertakings. Big jobs require big organizations to carry them out. As a party, though, we have always stood for free and competitive enterprise. Let us never lose sight of the word 'competitive.' We want no great industrial octopus sprawling across the province of B.C."

Dr. Kidd said that as leader of the party he would defend the right of labor to strike, "but equally strongly I would insist that labor be made responsible in law for its actions.

"If labor wants the authority, labor must accept the responsibility."

SOMETHING DIFFERENT in adult choral concerts is promised Victorians when the Vienna Academy Chorus comes to the city as first of the Famous Artists' series, 1958-59. The three-part program presents, as well as great choral literature, Viennese music in Viennese dress, and Austrian folksongs, dances and yodels in Tyrolean costumes. Concert date at Royal Theatre is Oct. 29. Box office opens at Kent's, Fort Street, Monday.

Six well-known guest artists plus guest conductors, Sir Ernest MacMillan and Henry Plukker, will be featured in Victoria Symphony Orchestra's ensuing season of 10 subscription concerts.

True to established tradition, the six soloists will all be Canadian musicians who have established enviable reputations both at home and abroad.

In addition to the two guest conductors, assistant conductor and concert master, Clifford Evens, will be on the podium for two of the concerts.

Hans Gruber, who earlier planned to conduct a minimum number of concerts in order to take time out for study, will now definitely be conducting the remaining six events.

TESTING

Director Henry King is trying to find out whether coffee or tea is better for pepping up people. He has asked members of the cast and crew of "The Bravados" to drink either coffee or tea—just one of them. The group, in Mexico on location, gets two beverages during meal times and breaks. "Actors always want to know how to increase their efficiency," he said. "Maybe we'll find out something from this experiment."

EXPENSIVE PRODUCTION

Yul Brynner says he will spend $5,500,000 to produce "The Gladiators." The picture will be made on location in Italy and Greece.

CURRENT CHOICE

Curtain Going Up On Play Season

By AUDREY St.D. JOHNSON

Did someone say Victoria wasn't theatre-minded?

If so, it becomes hard to credit the truth of the statement in the face of the season's opening entertainment schedule.

Three plays within less than a month! Three different dramatic groups.

But of course that's only half the story. It remains to be seen how hearty the public appetite is for these offerings.

An audience contributes a lot more than dollars—in fact, practically 50 per cent of the aesthetic value of any production.

Comedies are currently in command of the situation. A generally welcome state of affairs, though it is to be hoped some brave souls will shortly come up with something to vary the pace.

Dead Duck

St. Luke's Players tee off on Sept. 19 with a perennial favorite of the last decade, "The Chiltern Hundreds." It's an English comedy that can smell under certain circumstances—and not only in the figurative sense.

However we are definitely assured there will be no odor to this production—either way.

The property dead duck, for instance. It won't be a "real live" dead duck this time but a very convincing dummy—the handiwork of member Susan Gibson.

Time was, in a certain production of the "Hundreds" when a duck, long overdue for its last resting place, sent actors reeling from the stage to seek the fresh air, along about the third or fourth performance.

Cast of the St. Luke's production, which is being directed by Cmdr. Harry Lukey, has both talent and experience to set a fine pace. Stan Wade as the inimitable Beecham, Charles Gibson and Evanne Murray as Lord and Lady Lister, and Margaret Martin, among others should be convincing enough reason for going to the play to anyone who has seen their work formerly.

"Chiltern Hundreds" will play two nights at Oak Bay Junior High School and two at St. Luke's Parish Hall. (See Entertainment Calendar for details).

St. Luke's plans Priestley's "Laburnum Grove" as its second production.

★ ★ ★

'Original'

"The Laird's Wooin'," next on the list, Sept. 23, 24, is an original comedy with a Scottish twinkle to match the twinkle in author Laura MacBride's eye.

This dynamic lady is producing and directing the show as well. In addition she has taken on the slight additional hazard of doing it for a brand new group—the St. Andrew's and Caledonian Society Drama Group.

LAURA McBRIDE

Replacement

Unavoidable casting changes have assailed the Theatre Guild production of another comedy, "The Little Hut," but these are working themselves out we are told by director Lesley Allen.

Anabel Cranstoun has replaced Carol MacCormac as the female lead. Ken Bostock, Cliff Clarke and Karl Wylie are the men in the case.

Production will start Oct. 11 at Langham Court Theatre.

A (Don't Miss) AA (Oscar Class) B (For Rainy Days) BB (Worthwhile) C (To put in time)

(OSCAR CLASS) "THE KEY" (Odeon): — Columbia released but English-made, this story of the men who heroically sailed the little unarmed tugs into the war-ravaged Atlantic off the British coast to tow back the burning hulks that had been the targets of the screaming Stukas and the torpedoes of the U-boats, conceivably might be this year's "Bridge on the River Kwai."

One American actor is in it, William Holden, who was also in "Kwai." As the U.S. volunteer in the Canadian forces who is released to the tugboats because of his previous experience with this type of craft, his acting is of high order. But just as he was overshadowed by the virtuosity of Alec Guinness last year so he is in "The Key" by that magnificent English thespian Trevor Howard.

However, this should be in no sense thought of as a rivalry for they are all lost in the macabre, breathless quality of the play itself, "The Key," is based on a novel by Jan de Hartog, the screenplay being the work of Carl Foreman, the producer.

Thanks to the excellence of the direction by Carol Reed the picture fairly breathes life as the cameras pick up the movement of the littered jetties, the battered ships and the careless slouch of tired men carrying on almost beyond endurance.

Better still, thanks to the skill of the direction, the black-and-white camera work and the art of the actors, both stars and minor parts, "The Key" delineates war as few pictures have. It catches the spirit of the men, the bravery that overrides fear, the steel courage before and during the attack, that dissolves into weak vomitings over the rail in the calm that follows.

* * *

THERE ARE THE DEATHS, of course, ashore and afloat, the over-doses of sleeping pills, the wild, drunken moments when the soul doesn't want to be heard but only demands to be forgotten. Tugboat skipper Howard, however, has his own way of forgetting — Sophia Loren with whom he lives in a little flat, his private reason for wanting to come back again alive after each operation.

But Howard isn't Sophia's first affair. Her first was also a tugboater killed on the eve of their wedding. She's just there to supply comforts of the body and soul for those in the same line who come back. Howard himself got the key to the flat from the captain of another craft which "bought it." In his turn he has another key made for Holden, making him promise that should anything happen to him that he will take over the flat and treat the girl with gentleness, understanding and respect.

SOPHIA LOREN

WILLIAM HOLDEN
. . . overshadowed

This is the part of the story that makes "The Key" the sterling film it is. It, the thread of life between men and women at war, is somehow symbollic of love's greatness and war's hatefulness. It does, indeed, illustrate the cycle of man since man came to earth.

There is action as well, of course. When the tugs go on their heroic missions it is this action that supplies the brass for the breathing simplicity and wistfulness of the woodwinds and the muted strings in the symphony of life that so often promises so much and gives so little.

Runaway Grofe Forced Family To Agree to Musical Career

By HUMPHRY DAVY

I was surprised to learn on reading the program notes of Columbia's new recording of Ferde Grofe's popular Grand Canyon Suite of the difficult time the American composer had in becoming a musician.

In 1906 at the age of 14, he ran away from home because his family would not permit him to study music. He wandered for three years, working at various jobs, such as pressman, an elevator operator and milkman. At times he was penniless and was obliged to play the piano at hotels to pay his bills.

Davy

It was only when his family decided to encourage him in his musical studies that he returned home.

I wondered what chance a boy of today would have in repeating such an adventure. With school, juvenile and welfare acts, plus federal statutes, he wouldn't stand a chance of wondering further than Nanaimo.

The new recording of the Grand Canyon Suite is performed by the Philadelphia Orchestra with Eugene Ormandy conducting. It's a flawless performance and one of the best I've ever heard.

This work was composed in 1932 and was performed for the first time by Paul Whiteman and his orchestra. It became a favorite of many B.C. schools. The movement "On the Trail," was often used as a lively introduction to musical studies.

★ ★ ★

Among this month's new releases is an Epic recording of the music of Wagner. Selections include The Flying Dutchman — overture; Tristan and Isolde—prelude and Liebestod; Die Meistersinger von Nurnberg—prelude to Act I, Prelude to Act III; Tannhauser—overture.

This is good value for your money as the disc contains the most popular selections of the works of Wagner. They are performed by the Symphony Orchestra of the Bavarian Radio with Eugen Jochum, conducting.

TOMORROW'S TOP TUNES

A new one from Andy Williams, "Promise Me Love," is sure-fire. It has a cute lyric. And sings some close harmony, backed by a soft chorus. There's an appealing lilt to the arrangement. Kay Thompson wrote the number. (Cadence).

One man's reaction to rock 'n' roll music is summed up in the lyrics of Bobby Hendricks' "Itchy Twitchy Feeling." Bobby's vocal is slightly frantic, but so is the orchestration. It's a typical big-beat entry. (Sue).

Of the three versions of the dirge-tempoed "You Cheated," the Shields' entry has finally stepped forward and claimed leadership. Their version is full-bodied, and has a choral setting for the lead tenor's plaintive cries. (Dot).

Jerry Wallace has a doozie with "How the Time Passes." Utilizing just about every vocal trick in the book, Jerry makes an arrangement that is a show-stopper. Jerry gets off his message successfully in spite of the choral competition. (Challenge).

Continuing his rock 'n' roll portraits of girl friends, Chuck Berry immortalizes "Carol," as his follow-up to "Beautiful Delilah." It's a hard rock beat with Chuck's energetic eight-to-the bar guitar spelling out the notes for the forceful vocal. (Class).

A year ago we predicted the return of jazz to the pop field. Cozy Cole's new "Topsy I and II" is pure jazz and it's climbing as though it were rock 'n' roll. His articulate drum calls the easy beat in the style of the late Chick Webb; then his group picks up the tune. Guitar, clarinet, and unique instrumental solos highlight this double-sided masterpiece. Side II, the more popular, features one of the best drum solos we have heard since Cab Calloway used to feature Cozy with his old group. This is a real gasser. (Love).

TWO DOWN

Audiences aren't the only ones jolted by horror pictures. Two extras and a visitor fainted on the set of Allied Artists' "Frankenstein-1970" and had to be revived by a physician. The scenes responsible for the faints were of Boris Karloff as a mad atomic age scientist going to work on his victims in a laboratory. Dr. Samuel Schenck, on the set as technical adviser, handled the fainting cases.

AUTOBIOGRAPHY

Trust Companies Offer Fine Career

By HAL MALONE, Times Business Editor

Put your trust in a trust company, young man.

If you have intelligence, aptitude and initiative you'll enjoy a career that is interesting, varied and rewarding.

Put your trust in a trust company, young man.

If you have intelligence, aptitude and initiative you'll enjoy a career that is interesting, varied and rewarding.

The voice behind this advice belong to Sydney J. Crawley. He should know. Wednesday he filed 45 years in the trust business in his memory of a life well spent for retirement, well earned.

Malone

Altogether he has been in banking and trust work for 52 years. For 45 years he has been with National Trust. He has been manager of the Victoria branch which he organized in 1950.

His preference for the trust field as one which talented young men should consider as a career is reflected in his definition of a trust company.

Its functions include:

- Acting as executors, administrators and trustees of the estates of deceased;
- Acting as agents for handling investments;
- Handling personal savings;
- Holding mortgages;
- Handling stock transfers for industries (known as corporate trust). This phase is not handled by the company's Victoria office due to the few industries here.

A trust company's duties include the unusual in far-off places. In the First World War, National Trust, directed a port in South America for a Belgian corporation. Administering mills and railways are part of its portfolio.

Does a young man require special training to enter and succeed in the trust field?

"Legal training helps," Mr. Crawley said. "But lack of it is no bar to success. The general manager of our company isn't a lawyer. Neither am I. But the president of our company (one of the top three trust firms in Canada) is a lawyer."

CAN'T COMPETE

The lure of more attractive salaries by huge industrial corporations has resulted in a shortage of trained young men in the trust field.

"We can't compete with the large salaries offered law graduates by industrial giants," Mr. Crawley said. "But we can offer a career that, in my opinion is more interesting and seldom repetitious or monotonous. Every day we encounter new problems. The challenge they offer long ago convinced me that the trust business is desirable and rewarding."

If experience is an able teacher, Mr. Crawley has ample on which to base his conclusions. Fifty-two years ago he began his business career with the Union Bank of Halifax. Seven years and two banks later he joined National Trust in Winnipeg. With considerable distress (?) he forsook Winnipeg's unreasonable winters and melting summers for the west coast's more charming climes.

He'll begin to enjoy them in earnest as soon "as I get my desk cleared." Succeeding him in Victoria is A. M. Oswald.

* * *

Marine supply houses and boat owners may be interested in hearing this story about the "voice of the races," Jack Short.

A neophyte helmsman, Short sailed his "liner" into port of Sydney from Vancouver this week. Triumphantly he moored the vessel, marched into the lobby of the Sydney Hotel and encountered turf official "Sandy" Gilmour.

"I," said Short excitedly, "have just made the trip without a compass."

Mr. Gilmour, who is more familiar with a stop-watch for clocking horses than he is with navigational aids, wasn't too impressed. But being a sociable chap, he inquired: "Did you bring your charming wife?"

Executives of the Canadian Construction Association will present a brief to the provincial government when they visit Victoria Sept. 23-24.

Headed by CCA president Harold J. Ball of Kitchener, Ont., the group plans an eight-day tour of the four western provinces. They will visit apprenticeship centres and research institutions.

Main purpose of the tour is to gain first-hand knowledge of industry problems and developments in western Canada and to acquaint local construction men with CCA activities. This year the four western provinces are expected to account for over $2.3 billion or one third of the total construction volume in Canada.

* * *

Westcoast Transmission president Frank McMahon says the report of the Alberta Oil and Gas Conservation Board concerning the export of additional volumes of natural gas from that province "marks a step forward" in the development of Alberta's petroleum industry.

The board's report temporarily postpones the export of gas to the western United States. Mr. McMahon said his company will immediately make an amended application for permission to export gas surplus to Canadian needs.

Speaking of the report, Mr. McMahon said: "The board has determined Alberta's gas requirements for the next 30 years and has allocated to reserves required to supply Alberta and eastern Canadian markets. In making its decision, the board has devised a simple formula for determining the allocation of gas supply between Canadian and export markets."

LARGEST GAS WELL—What could be the world's largest gas well has been struck at Berland River, 160 miles northwest of Edmonton, Alta. The wildcat was drilled by B-A Oil-Shell Oil on a jointly-held reservation block. The pay zone in the productive reef is the thickest D-3 in Canada's gas drilling history. On an open-flow basis the well could supply the gas requirements of a city of over one million homes.

Railways' Bid for Rate Hike 'Most Serious'—Manning

EDMONTON (CP) — Premier E. C. Manning of Alberta Friday described the railways' application for a 19-per-cent general freight rate increase as a "most serious thing, particularly to Western Canada."

"I don't think it is a solution, other than a short-term solution, to the railways' problem," the premier said at a press conference.

"At the level they talk about," he said, "they would cut the amount of traffic and revenues wouldn't increase."

He said there is another phase, which is more important as far as areas like the Prairies and the Maritimes are concerned.

"A general increase in freight rates doesn't fall on the nation as a whole," the premier said, "but on a percentage of traffic where rates are not fixed by agreed charges and competitive rates."

MANY NOT AFFECTED

He said the agreed charges—special rates granted by the railway to shippers agreeing to use the railway for a certain percentage of its traffic—and competitive rates are not affected by a "general" increase.

In effect, this left the Prairies and the Maritimes picking up the tab on the increase, because these areas benefit little from the agreed and competitive charges.

Mr. Manning said the federal government must step in and cure the situation, either by making the increases apply across the board—and he said this is likely impossible—or by granting subsidies in a way that will let "the nation as a whole pick it up."

The railways have openly proposed a straight deal with the federal government, offering to settle all their contract disputes with some 160,000 railway workers if they get their proposed 10-per-cent boost.

The railways—facing a strike vote among their 130,000 non-operating employees — will apply to the Board of Transport Commissioners next week.

They said they will seek an immediate boost and try to get a fast ruling from the Ottawa board. They also want an extra 25 cents a ton on coal and coke freight charges.

A railway spokesman has explained that the 25-cent-a-ton increase in coal and coke rates would apply to all shipments regardless of distance whether two miles or 200.

Shortly after announcing the freight rate bid, the two railway presidents disclosed that they have written to Labor Minister Starr stating bluntly that if they get the full rate increase, they will settle with the "non-ops" and extend the benefits to operating workers, such as trainmen, engineers and firemen.

On that basis both groups of railway workers — represented by 18 unions all involved in contract disputes — would get a wage settlement worth about $60,000,000 a year.

In effect, the railway proposal dumps the whole wage problem into the board's lap—an unprecedented move in freight rate applications.

WINNIPEG (CP) — Any increase in freight rates would be a mistake, James Patterson, chairman of the Interprovincial Farm Union Council, said today.

Mr. Patterson said: "Western agriculture is already in an economic straight-jacket and any freight increase would be disastrous." "Labor suggests that the Crows Nest Pass freight deal is archaic, but evidence proves that the grain haul under these rates more than pays its way."

The selling had been expected by market experts for the last few weeks and, although it was much in evidence, there wasn't any great rush of selling. Rather it was a slow, steady pattern of selling which didn't stop the industrial index at Toronto from reaching a 1958 peak in mid-week.

Observers believe that money is piling up, just waiting for the opportune time to enter. But it isn't the general public's money that is about to become available, they say.

Brokers both in Canada and in New York report that substantial funds in the hands of institutional investors will soon be put into the markets.

GRADUAL ADVANCE

At the moment, the market is in a gradual advance and many mutual companies have yet to invest in the rise, say the brokers. They figure they are providing a floor which could prevent any sharp or prolonged downturn.

On the other hand, the general public is refraining from stock buying at the moment, the brokers say. Instead, the public is depositing its money in the banks, as witnessed by the record savings reported by Canadian banks for July.

Any buying by the public seems to be mainly in speculative stocks such as low-priced mines and oils. The experts say that this is the reason for the higher volumes being recorded.

At Toronto this week 18,349,000 shares were traded compared with 16,353,000 during last week's four sessions and 16,435,000 in the previous week.

CHANGES SMALL

Individual price changes during the week were generally small. A few industrials moved in a $3 range but most changes were confined to less than $2.

The low-priced mines were active, but in this group changes were also limited, usually to less than $1. Western oils and gas stocks had some strong advances as did several pipeline issues.

Index changes at Montreal: Banks off .01 to 51.27; utilities up 2.7 to 148.1; industrials off .2 to 281.7; combined up .8 to 237.2; papers new up 1.1. to 419.2; papers old up 1.7 to 1281.21; golds up .26 to 74.14.

South Africa's cotton crop in 1957 amounted to 30,000 bales, of which 7,000 were exported.

RCMP PAMPHLET

Businessmen Advised On Crime Prevention

Advice to the small businessman on how to prevent crime is contained in the RCMP's fourth issue in a series entitled "Crime in Your Community."

The pamphlet is being distributed to offices and stores across the country, B.C. criminal investigation branch superintendent J. R. W. Bordeleau said in a statement.

Main object is to assist the businessman who may be victimized by outsiders and to help businesses to strengthen internal security.

For example, the pamphlet asks if job applicants are investigated before employed, whether holders of key posts or "sensitive" positions are rotated in their jobs, whether statements of accounts are sent out and checked on their return, whether [illegible] made difficult if there is more care in the handling of stamps, stationery, petty cash and all forms of merchandise.

Lists of equipment serial numbers may be kept, all doors and windows should be strongly screened and hinged, or if at the rear, should be barred.

Rear doors should be lighted at night and burglar alarms installed on premises. Buildings should be searched at closing time.

A safe in which money is kept overnight should be lighted so police may see it and some bank note numbers should be listed separately.

In general security, the time and method of taking money to the bank should be varied and if large sums are involved a

The person who makes up the payroll should not disburse the money, the pamphlet advises. Bank statements should be checked as soon as received and company cheques should not be left where they invite theft.

CAREFUL CHECK

Most common method of stealing employs some form of forgery, the booklet says. Any alteration of items should be carefully checked.

Home Building Sets Record

OTTAWA (CP) — Starts and completions in the construction of new homes rose to record heights in the first seven months of 1958, the bureau of statistics has reported.

Starts rose to 88,177 homes, up from 62,359 last year and the previous high of 76,131 in 1956. Homes completed increased to 67,968, compared with 59,145 last year and 67,675 in 1956.

VPL GIFT TO NEW GALLERY

Marking the opening of Greater Victoria's new Centennial gallery, Victoria Press Limited today presented to curator Colin Graham an original painting by Frederick A. Verner, ARCA (1836-1928), as an addition to the permanent collection of the local gallery. Entitled "The Fading Race," the painting was obtained from the collection of G. Max Bell of Calgary and is regarded as one of the classics of artworks of the Canadian plains.

CITY GALLERY'S NEW $75,000 WING OPENED

'In Front Rank of Art Centres'

By NORMAN CRIBBENS

With the opening of its $75,000 fireproof wing today, Victoria Art Gallery moved into the front rank of Canada's art centres.

It is now one of four class "A" galleries in western Canada and as such will be able to secure class "A" exhibits from the National Art Gallery in Ottawa.

Overflow Crowd

Hundreds more gathered under the tall trees flanking he main drive and applauded heartily when Education Minister Leslie Peterson said:

"This splendid structure marks the culmination of many years of planning and persistent hard work by many people who have the cultural interests of Victoria at heart."

The new wing, located immediately in front of the main gallery, has two lofty exhibition rooms, a basement for preparation or storage of paintings and a glass-covered link to the entrance court at the main building.

It was dedicated by Archbishop Harold Sexton, who said:

"This is only the beginning of a greater and wider development in the cultural growth of our community. It means much to me, for I believe true art finds its best expression in the King of all beauty and glory."

Plaque Unveiled

Mayor Percy Scurrah unveiled a plaque commemorating the new building as a combined Centennial project built out of Centennial funds provided by the province with Victoria, Oak Bay, Saanich and Esquimalt.

"Today we have an art gallery worthy not only of the capital city of British Columbia but of the province as a whole."

The mayor then presented the Centennial silver medal to Miss Sara Spencer who dedicated her old family home at 1040 Moss Street for use by the art gallery. Miss Spencer was out of town when centennial medals were presented in Beacon Hill Park several weeks ago.

Foundations Laid

Commander Fred Fairfull, president of the gallery, paid tribute to past presidents "whose foresight and initiative have gone to produce the art centre we have today."

Ald. Geoffrey Edgelow, as chairman of the Greater Victoria Centennial Committee, emphasized that 150 Victoria school children are now receiving art instruction at the gallery every week.

"The opening of this new wing is therefore a very important milestone in the cultural growth of our city and the development of artistic consciousness among our younger citizens."

The ceremonies over, hundreds of men, women and children inspected the specially-prepared survey of Canadian paintings of the past 200 years, including the works of Emily Carr and the Group of Seven.

These include "Blackfeet Chief and Subordinates," a warm color study in the old pictorial style of Paul Kane (1810-1883) in which the features and expressions of the Indians are vividly depicted.

"The Car Ferry at Sidney, B.C.," by Edwin J. Hughes, is a sharp, realistic study, and there is a beautiful winter landscape painted at Laval by Cornelius Krieghoff (1815-1872).

The most revolutionary painting on display is "Tocsin," an example of abstract expressionism by the young Canadian painter Jean Paul Riopelle, who is now working in Paris. He has been hailed equally in Paris, London and New York as one of the most promising painters of the post-war era.

"He is probably the first Canadian artist to have attained a fully international reputation," said Colin Graham, curator of Victoria Art Gallery.

Main Runway Extension Now Assured

Defence Minister George Pearkes said today the way now has been cleared for long-sought runway extension at Patricia Bay Airport.

He said agreement between provincial and federal governments on rerouting of Patricia Bay Highway, announced Friday by Highways Minister P. A. Gaglardi, should remove the last obstacle to the project.

Moving of the road is vital to the eastward extension of the east-west runway from 5,000 to 7,500 feet, or well across the present highway right of way.

OTTAWA TO BUILD

The provincial highways department will lay out the road route, and the federal government will do the building at federal expense.

"I think that is the last of the stumbling blocks," Maj.-Gen. Pearkes said by telephone in Vancouver, where he is attending the provincial Conservative leadership convention.

"I don't know if work will start this fall, but certainly the concluding of negotiations with B.C. will bring a start that much nearer," he said. "Actually there has been work going on all summer. Surveys have been made, and work is to begin shortly on strengthening and repairing existing runways."

PRIORITY

"It is the government's intention to do the job as soon as funds are available. It is one of the priority airfield improvement jobs in Canada."

Mayor Percy Scurrah said he knew of nothing standing in the way of an early start on the extension program.

"It's a beautiful airport, but planes are getting bigger, and the airport must grow with the times. With longer runways Britannias and Constellations will be able to land here, and I understand trans-continental flights might originate from here."

MONTE ROBERTS

People keep coming up to me and asking me, what is the matter with you, why are you walking around half-asleep?

And I keep telling these people, go away, I am enjoying an attack of spring fever.

But the people will not go away, they say, you cannot have spring fever, this is not spring, this is September, this is autumn.

What is so wrong about having spring fever at this time of year?

Why should spring fever be confined to April and May?

I discussed this with Mr. William Mackie, our wonderful weatherman, just yesterday, and Mr. Mackie—bless him—said that, in a meteorological manner of speaking, there is no reason spring fever cannot occur on Sept. 13 as easily as on May 13.

"Cloudy with occasional sunny periods," said Mr. Mackie, "sunny periods with occasional clouds. Temperatures in the high sixties. Light winds.

"It could happen in May, it could happen in September.

"I am all in favor," said Mr. Mackie, yawning graciously, "of spring fever on a year-round basis, which is possible, of course, only in this, the fairest city of them all."

Additional support for my premise that spring fever can be a 12-month proposition comes from the persistent piscatorialist, Mr. Lee Hallberg, who, if he can't catch 'em, can certainly talk about 'em.

Mr. Halberg suggests we should take a lesson from the salmon

The spring salmon is a spring salmon in June, January, and any other month you care to mention.

"If a salmon can have spring all the time, why can't we?" asked Mr. Hallberg, before collapsing into a nearby hammock.

So don't bother asking me why I'm half-asleep.

I have spring fever, and I'm glad.

Annual general meeting and election of officers will be held by the Gyro Club of Victoria Monday, 6.30 p.m., at the Strathcona Hotel.

NO LIFEJACKET IN CRUISER; FINE IMPOSED

Walter Lapwood, 1461 May, was fined $5 and $3.50 costs in Sidney RCMP court Friday for failing to provide lifejackets in a pleasure boat.

Police said Lapwood was picked up in a check of small boats in the RCMP's educational and enforcement campaign for water safety.

They said Lapwood's 14-foot boat contained one other adult and two children and had no life-preserving equipment as required by federal legislation.

Power Board Workers Sign No-Strike Pact

The B.C. Power Commission and its employees have signed an agreement which provides that there shall be no stoppage of work either by strike or lockout for the next two years.

Difficulties will be solved by a five-step procedure or, failing that, by arbitration binding on both sides.

The agreement covering salaries and working conditions became effective Sept. 1, affecting 500 non-professional office, field and survey employees.

It provides for compulsory payment of dues under the "Rand Formula," which requires all employees to pay the equivalent of dues to the employees' association, whether or not they choose to become members.

2 Seamen Guilty

Two young naval seamen pleaded guilty in city police court to two charges of theft under $50 value of auto accessories from the city's market parking lot early today.

Allan Ho, 19, and Douglas Tufford, 21, were remanded to Wednesday for probation report and sentence.

'DOOR OPEN'—MARTIN

Chinese Hospital Request Welcome

Health Minister Eric Martin said today the government's "door is wide open" for an application by the Chinese Hospital for funds to help build a $35,000, 16-bed wing addition.

But he warned that the hospital was classed as private, not acute, and therefore not automatically eligible for a grant.

"But if they will come and see me," he added, "we will review their request. The door is wide open. We don't usually extend grants to private hospitals, unless they change their status."

ACTION CALLED FOR

Immediate addition of the wing was recommended at an emergency meeting of the Chinese Hospital board Thursday, called as a direct result of the death Wednesday from starvation and malnutrition of 71-year-old Chinese, Lum Doy.

Recommended was a new one-storey, cement block wing addition to the present crowded 24-bed building, a plan which brought applause from various Victoria groups today.

"The need is obviously there, and I am sure people will be sympathetic to any drive for funds," said Mayor Percy Scurrah. "There is no doubt something must be done about that hospital. The whole thing needs renovating."

Chairman of the all-Chinese board Rev. M. F. Leung said an immediate fund-raising campaign would be considered, along with a request for assistance from the B.C. government.

OWNED BY CITY

The hospital has been owned by the city for many years, but it is administered by the Chinese Benevolent Society, which has spent much money on it.

William Hooson, Victoria social welfare department administrator, said such an addition was "long overdue," although he noted that many of the ailing elderly Chinese in the Victoria area were loath to enter hospital "because they think it is the last ditch and that they will die there."

He said the hospital was actually a boarding and nursing home, as well.

Community Chest secretary Adrian Gilmore said the need for a larger hospital for Chinese persons had been "evident for some time."

"They want to be with their own people," he added. They want to eat their own food, and speak their own language. They are not comfortable in other hospitals."

IT'S DOLLARS TO DOUGHNUTS everybody wins when the Navy throws a cruller party. HMCS Naden drive to raise Community Chest funds was launched Friday, when cooks prepared nearly 3,000 doughnuts, served with coffee to all hands who could display Red Feather showing they'd contributed to the Chest. Serenades were provided by bandsmen of HMCS Ontario, including PO John Collins, who gives with sweet music while OS H. R. Kok munches merrily. (RCN Photo.)

Father, Son Jailed Two Months For Assault on Police Officer

A father-son team who pleaded guilty to assaulting a police officer in Victoria West early Thursday each were sentenced in city police court today to two months in jail.

Horace Taylor, 55, of 651 Alpha, and Douglas Taylor, 28, of 609 Alpha, were represented by James Proudfoot, who called four character witnesses on behalf of the accused before sentence was passed.

The witnesses, who had known the accused men for periods between 10 and 40 years, gave references ranging from "very good" to "excellent."

Mr. Proudfoot said H. and D. Taylor Trucking, operated by the accused, would suffer if jail sentences were given as the man and his son were alone in the business.

Also he pointed out, Douglas' wife is expecting a child.

The father, Mr. Proudfoot said, has one conviction for fighting 32 years ago, and Douglas has a clean record.

Magistrate H. C. Hall said the Court of Appeal "has pointed out that assaulting a policeman is a very serious offence and should be dealt with accordingly. It also directs that such a conviction should not be met with a fine."

The Taylors became abusive and jumped on Cons. James Ramsay as he checked a car parked in bushes off Wilson Street at 1.15 a.m. Thursday.

The older man was standing beside the car in the deserted neighborhood, and Douglas, with two women, was inside when the constable approached.

Suspended Term, Fine For Cattle Rustlers

Rowan Johnston and George West, both of Saanich, were given six months suspended sentence in Colwood RCMP court Friday for theft of a young bull from a Millstream Road farm in late August.

The men were fined $35 on a second charge of cruelty to an animal.

They had earlier pleaded guilty to the charges and appeared Friday for sentence after

Police said the animal apparently stumbled when the truck pulled too fast, breaking a foreleg, horn and the spine.

The court ordered that restitution be made to the owner.

TOPICS OF THE DAY

Attendance at child health clinics has been rising sharply, Victoria-Esquimalt union board of health reported today.

A quarterly statement said attendance during the first six months of this year showed an increase of 42 per cent over the 1957 average. Attendance was 3,805 in 1948, rising to a record 5,679 in 1957.

The board said a contributing factor to the increase is the Salk anti-polio vaccine program, now offered to infants as young as three months.

But whooping cough showed an increase with 34 cases reported. Last year there were none. Average for the three months is nine cases.

ASK The TIMES

Q. To settle an argument, can you inform me if maize (now commonly called corn) was ever found in the pyramids or any other ancient structure in Africa or Asia? E. H. L.

A. Maize is of American origin and was unknown in other parts of the world before discovery of America. Its modern history began in 1492 when two Spanish explorers reported on a grain they found in Cuba. Later, explorers to the New World found maize being grown by Indians in all parts of America where agriculture was practised, from Canada to Chile.

PUBLISHER'S NOTEBOOK

By STUART KEATE

R.I.P.—Camillien

There was a legend around Montreal that Camillien Houde could eat 12 dozen oysters at a sitting.

It was a lie. I had lunch with him one day, in an obscure north-end restaurant, and he ate only six dozen—before the regular dejeuner began.

Keate

That was the day, I recall, that we were trying to find out The Great Man's true weight. He was very sensitive about it. A Time photographer had done a sleazy trick: got down underneath the platform where Houde was speaking, and shot up, towards the embonpoint.

The result looked as though the USS Akron was floating across the page of the magazine in striped pants.

* * *

The press was frequently obliged to write unpleasant things about Camillien, because he presided over a gaudy and vice-ridden city.

They did so sadly, because they had great affection for this genial brigand—a rogue in the Shakespearean sense of the word; pleasantly mischievous, waggish, warm-hearted.

I remember calling on him one time after a particularly rough attack on him, in our magazine. Although he did not drink or smoke (in his latter years), the lower-right drawer of his desk at City Hall was kept for cigars and a bottle, and he offered me a drink.

"I do not h'understan," he sighed. "You h'ask me da polite questions, every t'ing is sympathetique, we discours like frans, and ten—poof! your magazine, she give me Hell!"

Houde was delighted. "I will always cherish this souvenir," he said. "You 'ave spread my nose all over the world."

* * *

On the political platform he was irresistible—the personification of French-Canadian gaiety, wit, and party fire.

In one campaign his opponents charged that Houde was separated from his wife and that he had to pay her $25 a meeting to show up with him on the platform.

Who can forget Camillien's reply to that one before a packed house?

"I turn now," he cried, with a dramatic wave in the direction of his spouse, "to this charge that I, Camillien Houde, mus' pay my wife $25 to come here wiz me.

"Let me say only zis—nevair, in hees life, 'as Camillien Houde paid a woman for ANY-zing!"

* * *

The crowd, of course, roared—and re-elected him.

The letter was in response to the action Thursday of the Alabama Court of Appeal which refused to reopen Wilson's case. He has been convicted of robbing with violence a white woman of $1.95.

The resolution was presented by Chief Justice C. J. Ford of Alberta and Mr. Justice Andre Taschereau of the Quebec Court of the Queen's Bench.

The section said it was not questioning the validity of Alabama law but opposed the sentence on the grounds of natural justice.

5 CHILDREN DIE IN FIRE

Ottawa Block Scene of Tragedy

OTTAWA (CP)—A fire took the lives of five children today as it roared through a central Ottawa apartment-and-rooming house.

Firemen were unable to save the children, trapped on the top floor of the three-storey brick dwelling.

But they were able to revive several other residents. Eyewitnesses said a man and a woman, both injured, jumped from a second-storey window into a net.

Four firemen were hurt battling the blaze which virtually destroyed the interior of the building.

Hundreds of spectators, some of them crying and sobbing, watched the fire. Eyewitnesses said for a time they could see the children crying for help from a third-storey window.

'INSOLENT' AFRICAN LIFE WORTH $140

PARY, South Africa (Reuters) — A 20-year-old white mother Friday was fined £50 ($140) for killing an African woman after the judge said he took into account that the servant had been "insolent."

Mrs. Marie de Wet was found guilty of shooting the 28-year-old African woman servant in the stomach and warned by the judge to be careful of firearms in the future.

A policeman testified that Mrs. de Wet told him the African woman had refused to do the washing or clean the house and had burned a petticoat belonging to her.

Vicious Crime Wave Hits Vancouver

VANCOUVER (CP) — Two men were robbed, a woman taxi-driver was assaulted and a man with a gun tried to break into a suburban apartment in a night of vicious crime on the lower mainland Friday night.

G. A. Barclay, 67, a Canadian Legion official, was beaten by two thugs and robbed of about $100 when he stepped from his car outside his Vancouver home.

An unidentified woman taxi-driver told police she was beaten, choked and criminally assaulted by a man who asked her into a house to help him subdue a "drunken brother." Police today were holding a 24-year-old laborer in connection with the assault.

CHALLENGER AND CHAMPION

An even, ding-dong battle was being waged in Vancouver today by Dr. Desmond F. Kidd, left, and Deane Finlayson for leadership of the B.C. Conservative Party. Just before balloting began this afternoon observers gave a slim edge to Finlayson who has held the post for seven years.

Advance Nod To Finlayson In Tory Vote

By PETE LOUDON, Times Political Reporter

(See also, Page 2)

VANCOUVER—According to most corridor oracles it will be Deane Finlayson who leads the Progressive Conservative Party when the shouting dies down at Vancouver Hotel tonight.

But the race, which was to be decided by balloting of 600 delegates between 2 and 3 p.m. today, was expected to end in a photo finish.

Last minute opinion polls gave a slight edge to the Finlayson campaign over that of Dr. Desmond F. Kidd. It is said committee workers for the present leader had marshalled 375 sure votes before balloting began.

Veteran political observers say this convention will stand out in history. Few can remember a leadership election that was so much in doubt to the final hour.

CAREFUL WATCH

Committee rooms of both candidates have been watched carefully. If there was a large crowd in Dr. Kidd's room, an hour later a crowd of similar size was packing the Finlayson quarters.

If one candidate received a standing ovation, his opponent got a welcome two minutes later of similar intensity.

See Scores, Page 29

LONDON (UPI) — Arsenal, once the glamour team of English soccer, took over first place in the league standings today by defeating neighboring Tottenham, 3-1.

The victory gave Arsenal a total of 10 points from seven games played. Tottenham's vulnerable defence now has yielded 18 goals in seven games, dropping the team among the tail-enders of the first division with only three points.

West Ham, which led the league going into day's games, suffered a 4-2 setback at the hands of Nottingham Forest and dropped back into a tie for second place with Luton and Bolton. Luton and Bolton played a scoreless tie.

Everton scored its first points of the season by upsetting Manchester City, 3-1, at Manchester, and the Wolverhampton Wanderers edged the Blackburn Rovers, 2-1.

Police Believe Truck May Be Tip To Hit-Run Death

Latest lead in an unsolved hit-run July 5 which took the life of Harry V. Mills, 78, of 1403 Ryan, was a green pickup truck abandoned about two months in bush near Sidney.

An unidentified source reported to police the truck was in bushes near the Sidney turnoff and RCMP were trying to trace validity of the report.

City police have been searching since the death of Mr. Mills a few days after the hit-run at Cook and Hillside, for a green pickup truck, about 1950 model, seen leaving the accident.

Stop China's War-Roar Ike Tells Khrushchev

NEWPORT, R.I. (AP)—President Eisenhower today appealed to Russia to prevail on Communist China to renounce use of force in Formosa Strait area and turn to peaceful negotiations.

In a new message to Soviet Premier Khrushchev, Eisenhower criticized the Russian leader for what he called a "one-sided denunciation" of United States policy in the Far East.

At the same time, Eisenhower made it clear that the U.S. has no intention of pulling its forces out of the Far East as Khrushchev demanded early this week.

Referring to Khrushchev's 4,000-word letter to him, Eisenhower said:

NO EFFORT FOR PEACE

"I regret to say I do not see in your letter any effort to find that common language which could indeed facilitate the removal of the danger existing in the current situation in the Taiwan (Formosa) area.

"On the contrary, the description of this situation contained in your letter seems designed to serve the ambitions of international Communism rather than to present the facts. I also note that you have addressed no letter to the Chinese Communists leaders urging moderation upon them.

"If your letter to me is not merely a vehicle for onesided denunciation of United States action, but is indeed intended to reflect a desire to find a common language for peace, I suggest you urge these leaders to discontinue their military operations and to turn to a policy of peaceful settlement of the Taiwan dispute."

While Eisenhower was conciliatory in tone in that respect, he was firm in making it clear that the United States is ready to fight in the Far East if the Communists push too far.

That also was the theme of Eisenhower's television-radio address Thursday night.

Reds Again Repel Quemoy Supply Convoy

Four Nationalist Chinese supply ships were forced to withdraw after unloading only a small portion of their cargo.

Within one hour the Reds poured more than 7,000 high-explosive shells into Liaolo Beach where the vessels were trying to unload supplies for the besieged Nationalist outpost island.

This was the third unsuccessful attempt by the Nationalists to run the blockade with U.S. warships escorting them within three miles of Quemoy. It was the first attempt under cover of darkness.

HONG KONG (Reuters) — Communist China today issued its fifth "serious warning" on the intrusion of United States warships into its territorial waters, the New China News Agency said.

Huge Canada Aid Plan for Needy

MONTREAL (CP)—A huge Canadian aid program for needy Commonwealth countries, ranging perhaps to more than $250,000,000 over the next three years, likely will be disclosed before the two-week, 11-country Commonwealth trade and economic conference opening here Monday.

At the same time, it was learned Friday, Canada plans to launch a vigorous attack against Britain's long-maintained import restrictions on goods from Canada and the United States, charging they are unjustified and discriminatory.

Initial shadow-boxing, undertaken at a confidential meeting of Commonwealth advisers Friday, indicated Britain will put up a stiff defence of her curbs, informants said.

Her government advisers were reported to have argued that Britain's accumulation of large reserves of U.S. dollars and gold —now totalling more than $3,000,000,000—is no indication she is on the road to complete recovery. The economic road was still precarious and she had to be cautious.

AIMED AT ASIA

However, the Canadian government delegation likely will continue the attack and some reference to this may be contained in the initial statement of welcome to be read by Finance Minister Fleming at Monday's opening.

The aid program would be disclosed later in the week, perhaps by Prime Minister Diefenbaker, when he addresses the delegates at a dinner Thursday.

Police Probe Jewel Theft

Oak Bay police today were conducting an investigation into three overnight burglaries in the municipality since Thursday, including theft of jewels with an estimated value of $1,500.

Police said the release of further details at this time would hamper the investigation.

Other departments in the Victoria area were co-operating with Oak Bay police on the case.

The jewel theft, from a private residence, as were the other burglaries, occurred Thursday night.

Both of the other entries took place Friday night and thefts included jewels, cash and other items, police said.

Virginia Joins 'Rebellion' As Faubus Closes Schools

LITTLE ROCK, Ark. (AP)—The governors of Arkansas and Virginia have ordered some schools closed in their states in the wake of the U.S. Supreme Court decision that integration of Negro students must proceed immediately at Arkansas' Little Rock Central High School.

This action was taken only a few hours after the unanimous decision of the court in Washington Friday.

At Newport, R.I., President Eisenhower issued a statement saying that anarchy might result from defiance of the court's integration stand and urging the people to avoid it.

Governor Orval Faubus of Arkansas signed laws passed recently authorizing him to close four senior high schools—including Central and a Negro school—in Little Rock. The schools had been scheduled to open Monday.

Faubus said he issued the order to avoid "impending violence and disorder." He set Oct. 7 as the date for a special election on the question of integrating the schools.

In Virginia, Governor J. Lindsay Almond, Jr., announced the closing of Front Royal High School in Warren County, effective Monday. It will be the first school to shut down under the state's plan for resisting desegregation.

The Virginia plan calls for

By VICTOR J. MACKIE, Times Ottawa Correspondent

MONTREAL—Delegates arriving here for the Commonwealth trade and economic conference anticipate some expansion of trade and measures for mobilizing more development resources may follow their talks, but they do not look for spectacular results.

The conference opens Monday in Montreal's newly built Queen Elizabeth Hotel, the most modern convention hotel in the world. More than 150 delegates will attend and they will have staffs that will double their number.

Canada's Progressive Conservatives have been urging the convening of such a conference for years. At times it appeared that the Tory call for such a Commonwealth meeting was based on a conviction that if only the members of the Commonwealth would hold such an economic conference all their economic troubles would disappear.

Now that the conference has actually come into being the Conservative government appears to be less certain that it will produce magical solutions to the many and varied economic and trade problems. Canadians and other delegates arrived at Montreal with a spirit of "cautious optimism" not too sure what could be accomplished, but hopeful that some good would come out of the two-week talks.

The British have stressed their desire to examine every possible means of extending Commonwealth trade. In the course of these discussions recent Canadian restrictions on certain British textiles and amendments to the Customs Act to tighten up its anti-dumping provisions will come under criticism.

Anxious Not to Antagonize U.S.

While seeking to expand trade within the Commonwealth there will be no suggestion of widening British preferential tariffs, it is understood.

The delegates will want to take no action that might antagonize the United States. While there will be strenuous efforts and exploratory talks aimed at increasing trade that increase will not be at the expense of the United States, Canadian government spokesmen have insisted.

He said the chief problem in Australian-Canadian trade is his country's shortage of dollars. He said he expected however, that the sterling areas would be strengthened during next week's talks.

Mr. McEwen said Australia regarded as serious the world fall in prices of primary commodities, particularly agricultural products. He said the possibility of devising some scheme of price stabilization will probably be discussed.

Britons Favor Business Missions

The British are coming to Canada convinced that Commonwealth trade can be given impetus through the exchange of missions of businessmen. This will be advocated rather than preferential tariffs.

A British plan for a Commonwealth bank may be dropped. There is a noticeable lack of enthusiasm in Canadian quarters. Canada appears convinced that it is unnecessary to have other agencies added to the World Bank and the International Monetary Fund.

New countries in the Commonwealth will be looking for sources of capital and other forms of aid.

. . . FAUBUS

the closing of any school that has admitted Negroes.

"NATIONAL TRAGEDY"

Georgia's Senator Richard B. Russell, one of the southern Democratic leaders, said "a great national tragedy impends." He said the south's white citizens are law-abiding but they won't "surrender to the dictates of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People merely because that organization is able to use the present Supreme Court as its mouthpiece."

In Little Rock, Mrs. L. C. Bates, NAACP Arkansas director, was asked what she thought of the governor's action in ordering the schools closed.

"The Negro children will just have to wait like the rest of the children until the schools are opened," she said.

Faubus moved only hours after the Supreme Court said in effect that Central High, scene of racial riots and guarded by troops last year, must continue integration no matter how violent the opposition. The school board had sought a 2½-year delay in integration.

PRIVATE SCHOOLS

Faubus' apparent objective is to close the four Little Rock high schools — including all-Negro Horace Mann High—then open Central High and possibly others as private schools with the state paying tuition.

He appears to believe the state thus can avoid forced integration because the Supreme Court has not issued integration orders involving private schools.

The legislature two weeks ago gave him power to close schools faced with forcible racial mixing in classes. An 1875 law makes the use of public school facilities by private groups legal.

Minutes after he signed the school closing bill, Faubus accepted a summons in the state court suit filed by a woman who is a segregationist but does not want the schools closed.

The timing of the suit led to speculation that it involved more than met the eye but observers were unable to determine its exact meaning.

OTTAWA (CP)—L. Phillipe Picard, 59, Canada's ambassador to Argentina since late 1955, is leaving his post, it was disclosed here Friday. The decision of the former Liberal member of parliament was confirmed by Finance Minister Fleming, who said "politics have not entered into this decision."

'THE CEMENT'

We've Got Sentimental Backbone

TORONTO (CP) — The immense power of emotional and sentimental ties are the backbone of the British Commonwealth, Viscount Hailsham of London said Friday night.

"The cement of the Commonwealth is not only, or even primarily, economic," the lord president of the Privy Council and chairman of Britain's Conservative party told the Canadian Bar Association at its annual dinner.

"I believe that we are too slow to recoghize, perhaps in a sense too shy to assert, the immense power of emotional and sentimental ties.

"Though most of us would desire something more showy and perhaps more intellectually satisfying, we cannot but be grateful that we have an association as flexible, as sensitive, as useful and as effective as the British Commonwealth of Nations."

Airman Found 2 Still Sought

EDMONTON (CP)—The air force has successfully completed one air search in the northwest and today will increase its efforts in another.

Found alive and well in northern British Columbia late Friday was Staff Sgt. K. E. Barber of the United States Air Force. His light plane crashed Monday after straying from his Alaska Highway route to his home base at Elmendorf, near Anchorage.

Still missing farther south, in northwestern Alberta, are forestry worker Richard Bolam, 29, of Edmonton and his passenger Don Roberts of Fort Vermilion, Alta. They, too, disappeared Monday on a short 40-mile flight to take provisions to firefighters in the region north of Grande Prairie.

. . COMMONWEALTH

The Canadian hope is that the offer will encourage other Commonwealth countries to take similar steps, helping to overcome poverty in the Asian countries, Ghana and the former British colonies moving to full independence, such as the West Indies Federation and Nigeria.

GIFTS OF FOOD

Here's how the Canadian aid program likely will shape up:

1. A boost in the annual $35,000,000 Colombo Plan contribution to south and southeast Asia perhaps to $50,000,000 a year.

2. Annual gifts of food, mostly wheat, to Asian countries, valued at some $25,000,000. Coupled with this offer would be a Canadian pledge to "consult" other wheat-producing countries, such as Australia and the U.S., before the food gifts are made, to avoid charges that Canada might be upsetting normal commercial wheat markets.

3. Direct aid to the West Indies of between $10,000,000 and $20,000,000 a year for capital expansion of that Caribbean area.

The Canadian Commonwealth aid program would be established on a basis of continuing for at least the next three years. At that time the situation might be reviewed and the program revised or extended, depending on economic developments in Canada and the receiving countries.

Ex-'Freedom Fighter' Returned to Hungary

NEW WESTMINSTER (CP) — A Hungarian "freedom-fighter" branded a Communist organizer has been returned to Hungary by the Canadian Immigration Department.

Zigmond Pater, 27, described by officials as an "intense" man known to have been in contact with Communist party leaders in Vancouver, left with five others who had asked to go home on compassionate grounds.

Pater requested the government to pay his way to Hungary a month ago. "We were only too happy to assist him out of the country," said an official.

gates congregating on the fifth floor.

When Deane Finlayson gave a rousing speech, Dr. Kidd followed it with another address of equal merit. (But on the whole, speeches by both candidates have been described as lacking fire. On major issues, the two candidates were in agreement).

What gives the edge to Finlayson? Most feel it is the fact he is a young man who has already proven himself by sticking with the party during the tough years.

Dr. Kidd, while showing all the outward signs of a good leader, hasn't been around long. A party member for less than two years, he is still a newcomer to many of the delegates.

To Choose Leader

FREDERICTON (CP)—New Brunswick's Liberal party is to hold a convention next month to choose a provincial leader after nearly two years without one.

The meeting, set for Oct. 10-11, will elect a successor to Senator Austin C. Taylor of Salisbury, appointed to the Senate in January, 1957.

Tories Whoop Up Storm In Leadership Battle

By PETE LOUDON
Times Political Reporter

VANCOUVER—With a rootin', tootin', whoopin' nomination night demonstration under its belt, the Progressive Conservative convention settled down today to the solemn business of choosing a leader.

To nobody's surprise, the choice will be between present leader Deane Finlayson and aspirant Dr. Desmond F. Kidd.

If the Tory delegates intended to prove there was life in the old party yet, they succeeded—at least on a decibel basis.

FIGHTING SPEECHES

As party veteran Hon. H. H. Stevens put it: "If it isn't the best convention since 1902, it's certainly the noisiest."

Amid all the noise, the two candidates joined in fighting speeches asking for party loyalty—but each made a fighting speech on his own behalf.

Mr. Finlayson, who called the convention last summer to obtain what he describes as a "clear mandate," told the delegates Friday night that "I wish to assure myself and the public that I command the loyal and unselfish support of the majority of our party membership."

In turn, Dr. Kidd said that finally and inevitably "the hour of decision is with you.

"The year of decision is with this party," he said. "Emphatically, vehemently, I say that we are once again a major political force.

YEARS NOT LOST

A massive ovation greeted Finlayson when he rose to speak. He reviewed the years since he took over the leadership in 1952 and said: "However, these years have not been lost.

"Had we not done our duty this party would not today be considered as the alternative to the crowd in Victoria. We would not be here in this convention."

The party leader reviewed Progressive Conservative provincial policy and criticized the Social Credit administration for a lack of policy.

Mr. Finlayson said British Columbia has reached the "point of catastrophe in labor discord."

The time had come for "a new, streamlined labor code to replace the present acts, many of the conditions of which are in conflict with the other.

"I do not believe that this is the time to use a big stick on labor although I will confess that certainly there is provocation in some quarters.

"I believe that this is a time for sober thought but it is also a time for action. I have said that the various forces should be brought together immediately to clean their own houses. I have also said that the government should review its entire labor legislation."

Dr. Kidd, who also got a room-shaking welcome, said it was "Time the people of B.C. were given the type of government they want."

WASTEFUL IDEAS

"They have had enough of flights of fancy," he said. "Enough of ideas conceived in haste and executed in waste. Our taxes are the highest in Canada—our debt also the highest. As your leader I will fight to see the people of B.C. are given the real facts of our finances."

Dr. Kidd talked about the north, which as a practising geologist he knows intimately.

He said: "We live in an area of large undertakings. Big jobs require big organizations to carry them out. As a party, though, we have always stood for free and competitive enterprise. Let us never lose sight of the word 'competitive.' We want no great industrial octopus sprawling across the province of B.C."

Dr. Kidd said that as leader of the party he would defend the right of labor to strike, "but equally strongly I would insist that labor be made responsible in law for its actions.

"If labor wants the authority, labor must accept the responsibility."
